Yes, Mr. Shaw, We're Learning
A Smart Young Girl
Mr. Steuer, Et Al, Go Flying
To Him That Hath

— By Arthur Brisbane —

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW tells the world that Russia is "the ablest and most enlightened government in the world."

H. G. Wells, who knows more about the real world than Shaw has ever known, even when he was young and doubted his infallibility, says Russia may not get on her feet "because she has produced no body of managers, no body of educated men, free, able and willing to work together.

"An ego-centered autocrat with a political party disciplined to death, a press bureau and secret police is no substitute for that."

Russia imports her managers from America and Germany, but that does not mean that she will never produce her own.

Shaw says an American gangster in Russia "would have as much chance of survival as a rat in a yard full of terriers." Mr. Shaw does not know the American gangster.

Mr. Shaw observes that America kills you for committing murder, and praises you for making money. That in Russia they kill you for making money, and put you in jail, four or five years for committing murder. If that's so, the Russians would kill Shaw. He makes lots of money.

Shaw says Americans should face "the stupendous possibility that the United States may have something edifying to learn from Russia."

Possibly America could learn something from Timbuctoo, as they have learned something about racing from the tortoise.

At present the whole world is busy learning. Russia is learning from Americans how to organize industry, and American industry and finance are learning from their own mistakes how to avoid similar mistakes in future.

When Russia has a group of hundred time millionaires and an occasional billionaire, like ours, money will go to their heads as it went recently to the heads of our big men and small stock gamblers.

That "monarchies are destroyed by poverty and republics by wealth" — as [illegible] when Prudhomme said it.

Shaw remarks that he has "cited enough to make even the most absurd American (and Americans are the most absurd people at present on earth) remember . . . that those who live in glass houses should not throw stones!"

Shaw has not said enough to convince anybody that human nature and the history of mankind can be abruptly changed by any mixture of German Communism and Muscovite Communism.

Drink a toast, if only in soda pop, to Miss Charlotte Hodgkinson, 19 years old, who took flying lessons for 76 minutes, then flew by herself, and did it well.

It would almost cure your "depression blues" to see that young American girl waving her arms from the cockpit.

Even birds do not learn to fly as quickly as that, although they begin much younger.

Flying progresses steadily. Hourly flights from New York to the Newark Field and on to points West and South have been inaugurated. The young lady mentioned above proves how easy it is to learn to fly if you have a well balanced brain. And busy men actually use airplanes.

On Sunday, for instance, in a Sirius Lockheed single motor plane, such as Lindbergh uses, Walter Blumenthal, of Hallgarten & Co., flew down from the Adirondacks to the Curtiss Field in New York, with an interesting load, flying over New York at night, doing the 270 miles in two hours.

Walter Blumenthal, who piloted the ship, is a banker. One for his passengers was Bernard F. Gimbel, department store owner. The other passenger was Max D. Steuer, who proved recently that you can convict a banker in New York. And, most interesting, to the student of eugenics, is the fact that the professional pilot, a young man of 20, who took his turn at the controls, was Russell Thaw, son of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and Harry Thaw, both well known to reporters.

"To him that hath shall be given."

The late, generous Payne Whitney, now in heaven, where the Bible was written, can tell them that his case proves the truth of that text.

Mr. Whitney left a large estate, which paid inheritance taxes of more than $17,000,000, leaving more than two hundred millions for distribution.

Since that time, the value of his estate has increased by more than 52 millions, and on that increase, the estate pays no taxes

GIRL JUMPS TO ESCAPE KISS

VICTIM FOUND SENSELESS IN ROAD

Jumps From Speeding Car as Youthful Escort Tries to Kiss Her

Bruised and with speech gone through the shock of the experience, Jessie Downes lay on a hospital cot tearfully trying to piece together the details of a story involving a Canton youth.

The girl's step-mother, who yesterday was released from the Free Hospital for Women, was on the verge of collapse today after visiting her step-daughter at the City Hospital.

She said the girl was at home yesterday from noon until 4, returning at supper time for her meal.

Clarkeburg, W. Va., Sept. 1—While the machinery of the law was thrown into high gear to speed quickly to the gallows Harry Powers, alias Cornelius Pierson, mail order murderer, his name was linked today with the slaying of pistly Mary Baker of Washington.

Her body was found in a ditch near Arlington Cemetery on April 20, 1930.

Washington investigators requested Detective Carl Southern of Clarkeburg to grill the "cow face" butcher regarding the crime.

Two of the three witnesses in the capital who saw a man get into an automobile with Miss Baker when she went for her last ride were reported to have said Powers from his pictures, resembled the escort of the girl.

"I will do all I can, but Powers has stopped talking," said Detective Southern.

BROWN IS SCORED IN AUTO RATE INCREASE

Motorists Throughout State Join in a Vigorous Protest Against New Schedule

HOW WILL the Proposed Increase in Auto Insurance Rates for 1932 Affect You? Complete Chart of Rates for Each City and Town Appears on Page 6.

Removal of Insurance Commissioner Merton L. Brown was urged today by Mayor Curley as a wave of protest swept the State following announcement of the proposed increase in compulsory automobile insurance rates.

Declaring the proposed rates to be "audacious, unwarranted and outrageous" and to be directed against the small car owner, who can least afford increases, the mayor said:

"An aroused public is the only effective means of bringing about the removal of the present insurance commissioner and a repeal of the existing law, with substitution of a more equitable basis by some form of demerit system.

FAVORS FAIR LAW

"I am in favor of a compulsory law, but I do not favor the present law, because of its apparent inequity. Under the present statute the insurance commissioner announces the rates on Sept. 1 and the people are given an opportunity to protest prior to the 15th day of September, upon which dates the rates are finally promulgated.

Of course, the public cannot be expected to procure the necessary statistics to offset the insurance commissioner within that short period of time.

"Furthermore, unless fraud can be established, the decision of the insurance commissioner is final, for the appeal to the Supreme Court for a review of his decision, as allowed by the statute, is useless unless it can be shown that the insurance commissioner acted fraudulently.

"I am satisfied that the com-

FR. PATTERSON IS DEAD AT 81

Rt. Rev. Monsignor George J. Patterson, pastor of St. Vincent's Church, South Boston, died today in the rectory. He was 81 years old and had been ill a long time.

A native of Boston, Monsignor Patterson was ordained at St. Mary's Seminary, near Baltimore, nearly 55 years ago.

He was formerly administrator of then Cathedral of the Holy Cross here and pastor of St. Peter and Paul Church, South Boston. A sister, Helen, who was his housekeeper, survives.

His first appointment was at St. Patrick's, Roxbury, where he remained until made pastor at St. Bridget's, Abington. In 1887 he was made pastor at St. Vincent's, leaving there ten years later to become administrator of the Cathedral. Later he was made vicar-general of the archdiocese.

Mgr. Patterson was born in the old Fort Hill section of the city and attended the Boston public schools.

While vicar-general he was elevated to the title of monsignor by Pope Pius X. He was assigned to SS. Peter and Paul parish as pastor in 1910 and five years later was transferred back to St. Vincent's.

During the Boston police strike in 1919 he risked his life to save three volunteer policemen from a mob that was hurling bricks and stones at them. He placed himself as a shield before the officers and quieted the rioters.

WRECKERS TRY TO DERAIL NEW HAVEN R. R. TRAINS

"MONTREALER" ENGINE IS DAMAGED

Obstructions Piled on Tracks Near Labor Camp Almost Cause 3 Crashes

Woodmont, Ct., Sept. 1 (AP)—Three trains, including the Montrealer, struck a series of obstructions placed on the tracks of the New Haven Railroad last night in what officials in New Haven today described as deliberate attempts to derail trains.

Engineer Nagle of the Montrealer said his train had run into a pile of tie plates and ties on Track 4, near the Woodmont Labor Camp.

ENGINE DAMAGED

He noticed the obstruction from a distance and brought the train to a stop just as it struck the pile. The engine was slightly damaged.

Conductor Scoville reported finding two piles of tie plates and railroad ties within 1,000 feet of each other. Nearby, he also found a pile of stones and tie plates on the switch of Track 3. In addition he reported finding a twelve-foot rail across Tracks 1 and 3.

3 OTHERS HIT STONES

The engineers of Train 377 of the Railway Express Agency, bound to New York from New Haven, and of a New Haven-to-Bridgeport freight train also reported having run into a pile of stones in the same vicinity. Neither of these trains was damaged.

The Montrealer was delayed 45 minutes here. It left New York last night at 8:45 (E. S. T.) and was due at Montreal today at 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.). Railroad detectives joined with local officials in an investigation.

To the New York Hospital Society, he gave more than 21 millions, to the New York Public Library more than seven millions, more than three millions each to Yale and Cornell.

The Payne Whitney estate is said to be the biggest ever appraised in New York. There have been bigger American fortunes, however, but in some cases much of the fortune has been given away before the death of the owner.

John D. Rockefeller, for instance, has given away more than five hundred million dollars to public philanthropies. If he had kept all the money he ever had he would, to use the comparison of the late J. Ogden Armour, make Mr. Whitney "look like a gypsy."

Automobile makers will learn, with pleasure, that Mr. Whitney left 29 automobiles worth over $35,000. They cost more than that.

The national, state, city, county and township governments look around and find new things to tax. They should, if the taxation is just, for they need the money.

Chicago finds 46 corporations operating privately-owned cars worth more than 84 million dollars. Tax on these cars will help pay school teachers.

President Hoover, to avoid extra taxation that would be doubly discouraging in this depression, will have the government borrow about one thousand million dollars. That is a small part of our national expenses, but it will help. Not so long ago, this country was horrified to learn that the government expected to spend one billion dollars in two years.

Mr. Mellon will be able to borrow the billion needed on bonds running over a period of 20 years at 3 per cent.

When Europe and especially the British hear that they will say "alas and alack." There was a time when British "consols" sold on a basis of 2 per cent and less.

ROOSEVELT OPENS WAR ON CRIME

Asks New York Legislators to Give Police Extraordinary Means to Combat Gangs

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Gov. Roosevelt today sent to the legislature a special message urging immediate enactment of legislation to combat crime.

The executive proposed that the State's anti-pistol law be strengthened, that the private possession of machine guns be prohibited, and that the disorderly conduct section of the penal law be strengthened to aid communities in ridding themselves of criminals.

"Lawlessness which expresses itself in terms of gang warfare, hold-ups, and reckless shootings must be warred upon by organized society," the governor said.

"In normal times, normal statutes and a vigilant police force are able to meet normal outlawry. These are not normal times. Extraordinary measures today are imperative to uphold the hands of the police. Gangdom has challenged the strength of the law. That challenge we must meet."

COOLIDGES ARE PESTERED BY TOURISTS

By HERBERT CARL
International News Correspondent.

Plymouth Notch, Vt., Sept. 1—Calvin Coolidge as a private citizen appeared today to be having as hard a time to enjoy a quiet summer vacation as he did in the Black Hills of South Dakota and on Little's Point, Swampscott, Mass., when he was President of these United States.

GAWKING TOURISTS

The Coolidge homestead, nestling snugly in the once peaceful, short, narrow defile in the foothills of the Green Mountains, has become the Mecca for thousands of tourists from all sections of the nation and the famous couple find themselves in competition with the geyser "Old Faithful" and the wandering bears in Yellowstone National Park.

That great American summer pastime of travelers, "gawking," is on in full tilt and the nation's former chief executive and his wife are the objects. They try to go about their daily affairs as if they were not being watched at every turn by the private citizens in this "Land of the Free."

IT'S THE BIG SIGHT

Tall, lanky, sun-tanned, good-natured "Herb" Moore, second cousin to Mr. Coolidge and authorized by the state's attorney of Vermont to "keep the situation in the Notch well in hand," estimated today that at least 1500 automobiles roar up and down the long pull almost every day to pass the Coolidge homestead.

WOMAN FALLS 90 FEET; DIES

Mrs. Anna Mednitsky, 59, of 389 Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, plunged 90 feet to her death early today from a balcony of Beth Israel Hospital, while her nurse was out of the room.

The woman, a sufferer from asthma, was admitted to the hospital last Friday and was under treatment in room 710A, with Miss Katherin Moriarty as night nurse.

At 4:15 a. m., according to the nurse's report, she left the patient's room and returned at 4:45 to find the bed empty.

Miss Moriarty searched along the corridors for Mrs. Mednisky, but found no trace of her. Stepping out on the balcony outside the room, the nurse then looked down and saw the body on the ground, 90 feet below.

The night supervisor, Miss Mildred Ennis was notified and Dr. Hyman Naterman was called after the woman was carried back into the hospital. Dr. Naterman pronounced her dead.

Hospital authorities told police they believed Mrs. Mednisky, having difficulty in breathing while in bed, rose and stepped out on the balcony for air, lost her balance and toppled over the rail.

GRAF ZEPP IS NEAR BRAZIL

Fernando Noronha, Brazil, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin passed over this island, 125 miles from the eastern extremity of Brazil, early this afternoon.

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin was sailing across the South Atlantic today on the last stretches of a non-stop cruise from Germany to Brazil with a payload of 13 passengers, mail and freight.

The Hamburg-American line received a radio giving the Graf's latest position as 3.51 north latitude and 29.52 west longitude. This would put her about 900 miles on an air line from Pernambuco, her destination.

STUNNED GIRL FOUND IN ROAD

Then she went out to attend a band concert in Canton.

At this point, the girl began to sob and softly picked up the threads of the experience.

"I met a boy I knew at the concert. I can't remember his name. I only knew him by sight, anyway. He introduced me to another boy about 19. He didn't call him by name. He simply said: 'Meet me pal.'

"This boy asked me to go for a ride. And I did. We started for Randolph. He tried to kiss me but I wouldn't let him. I don't know how it happened but I jumped from the machine and I don't remember anything more."

The girl's step-mother, however, considers the fact mysterious in that the young woman was found on the side of the road going away from Boston.

PICKED UP SENSELESS

The girl was picked up unconscious by a Milton roadside by two truckmen, Stephen Jacowski and his helper, Julius Unaks, both of South Boston.

"Jessie has been living with me for most of the three years that I have been married to her father," the stepmother said. "He came for me at the hospital and took me home at noon and then he went to work. He works for the Reynolds Construction Co. Jessie was home most of the afternoon and was apparently normal last night at 5 o'clock when she left the house to attend a band concert.

"Her father knows nothing about her condition or experience. We didn't even know she hadn't come home last night. I was exhausted because of my illness and her father and I retired early.

FIRST WORD FROM POLICE

"He knocked at the door of her bedroom this morning, but when he got no answer he thought she was asleep and didn't want to awaken her. Not until the police came and told me of the happening was I aware that she hadn't spent the night at home."

Sgt. John Haley, of the Milton police, accompanied Mrs. Downes to the hospital today. He questioned the girl at length. Police investigating the case, are looking for the young man who took the girl for the automobile ride.

Jessie's mother lives in Fairfield, Me. She makes her home with her dad and step-mother.

The girl will be discharged from the hospital in a few days, physicians said. An examination was to be made this afternoon to determine if an attack had been made upon her.

LONELY SEEK LIFE, OFTEN FIND DEATH IN 'MARRIAGE CLUBS'

MATE-BY-MAIL 'ADS' INTRIGUE BOTH SEXES

"Correspondence Club" Book Reveals Strange Bids for Happiness

Wedding bells. And orange blossoms. And they lived happily . . .

The same mirage of happiness that sent Katherine Clark of Watertown to her death at the hands of Archie Moock.

The same mirage that has sent countless other lonely hearts to bitter disillusionment.

But the same mirage that sends more lonely hearts on and on and on . . .

Matrimonial agencies, whether they wish to be called such—or more politely "social agencies"—thriving on the lonely hearts.

Unmindful that Katherine Clark, three years ago, met ghastly death instead of a life partner, when she selected Archie Moock from her "correspondence club," Dorothy Lemke sought happiness the same way.

THRIVE ON LONELINESS

Mrs. Clark, a Watertown divorcee, was slain in the woods near Spokane, Wash. The horrible fate of Mrs. Lemke at Clarksburg, W. Va., is fresh. That of Mrs. Clark was forgotten.

In a short time Mrs. Lemke's fate will be forgotten. What will be the tragedy of the future?

The "ads" that fill pages of a "correspondence club" medium are a cross section of the lonely hearts seeking those same wedding bells, those same orange blossoms and the happy thereafter.

There is Comedy. Tragedy. Pathos. Laughter. Tears. Smiles.

Some notices are humorous intentionally or otherwise. Some are cunning. Some are clever. Some are stupid. But they all are human.

There are women . . . .

Castlewood, Va.—An American widow, aged 45, worth $5000, wishes to become acquainted with a nice gentleman that would appreciate a kind, gentle woman with a pleasing disposition. Matrimony in view. Those interested please write and learn more.

Who carelessly attract the cupidity of men.

And women . . . .

ALL ANGLES OF LIFE

Norton, Mass.—I am a lady of 30 but look younger, and am of a very loving disposition. I am a blonde with bobbed hair, and full of pep, very neat and clean. Would like to become acquainted with a gentleman who is good natured and has a car. Those who write will not be disappointed.

Who appeal to good nature.

And women . . . .

No. Carolina—An American widow, aged 31, good cook and housekeeper, likes a home life and will go any place to live with the right mate. I wish to marry soon, but no drunks or gummers need write. Only gents from 45 to 60.

And many women . . . .

Brattleboro, Vt.—I am single, medium height, middle aged, considered good looking, lovable and am looking for a good husband. All letters answered containing stamps.

Who want stamps.

And most of them are old, or getting old. Reaching the half of life that makes loneliness so appalling. That paints the single state in stark fashion. That causes them to reach out for the straw that will save them from drowning in solitude.

"I am 47, 52, 60, 65; yes, and 70!" The men. What of them?

It's just the same.

They're lonely . . . .

Boston, Mass.—An American gentleman, 43 years of age, 5 ft., 5 in. tall, weight, 148 pounds, pleasant disposition, is very lonely, owns a new car with which to view the country.

Or "helpless" . . . .

Shirley, Ark.—I am an honest man and would like to meet lady from 30 to 40 years of age. Am a widower by death. Have four children and need someone to help

Year's First White Frost in Lowlands

The season's first frost whitened the lowlands in sections of New England today, with comparatively low temperatures for summer reported in Lexington and Springfield. At Springfield the thermometer ranged down to 34 for a minimum at an early hour today.

It will warm up again tonight, however, according to the forecast, which reads: Partly cloudy and warmer tonight; Wednesday mostly cloudy with showers; moderate east to south winds.

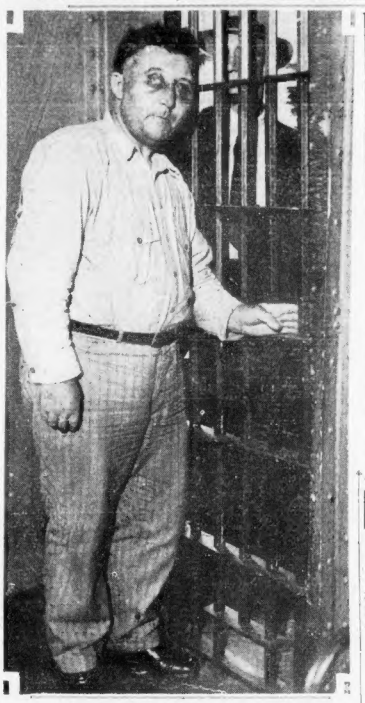
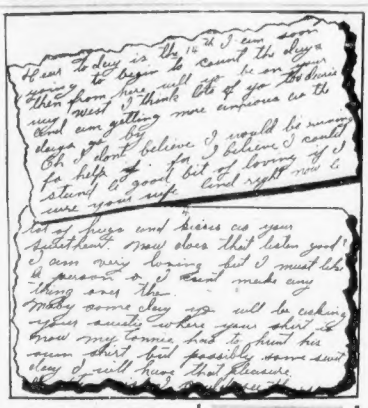
HUMAN STUB, BUT GIANT IN LOVE

Police Hunt Hit-Run Speeder in Charlton Boy's Death



SHORT, WIDE, UGLY—BUT SWEET

"Cow Face" Powers didn't stand high in his pictures, but he carefully explained to his victims that he was 67 inches over all. (How many feet is that?) Standing at his cell door he doesn't look what he claimed to be—a high-speed Romeo.



HER COUNT STOPPED

DRY SQUEALERS ARE PAID HERE

It still pays to "squeal" to the New England federal prohibition force, despite announcement from Washington that "stool pigeons" were being ousted from the service.

"If a man comes here and offers to furnish us information that will aid us in carrying out the prohibition law, we pay him according to what the information is worth," Maj. Henry S. Goodnough, acting prohibition administrator for New England, said today.

He said he has no orders from Washington to get rid of "stool pigeons" and that no informers were regularly employed, as such, here.

"Those paid for information are not employes. We have not paid a woman for information of this kind for at least two years," he said.

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

Miss Virginia Bell, of Hagerstown, Md., shown here, was another mail order sweetie of Harry F. Powers, confessed Bluebeard.

WHAT IS HE THINKING ABOUT NOW?

As the hangman's noose looms closer Powers spends his time in sullen silence. His eyes are puffed and bruised, and his lawyer says he was put through a brutal third degree. But that isn't what's on his mind. And his face doesn't beam the love that landed him in the cell. (International Newsreel photos.)

VICTIM IS TAKEN TO DOCTOR BY BOSTON MAN

Youngster Gave His Own Life in Effort to Save That of Girl Playmate

Charlton, Sept. 1 — While State and local police were combing the highways today in search of a damaged hit-and-run auto which killed 8-year-old Fred Peterson on the Southbridge highway last night, Herbert Talbot of Norton, a Boston wool merchant, notified the troopers that he was the autoist who took the boy to a doctor's office.

He told police he deliberated before picking up the injured boy but finally favored this action in preference to pursuing the hit and run speeder. The machine which killed the little boy was in front of him, Talbot said. He was unable to get the registration of the car.

Talbot said he saw the machine strike the child when the boy leaped in front to push a playmate out of danger.

The boy was walking along the highway with Mary Sullivan, six, who had been playing with him at his home on Maple st. When the girl started for her home a short distance down the highway the boy accompanied her.

They clasped hands and started across the road only to see a car bearing down on them at a fast rate of speed. The girl broke from the clasp of her playmate and started back. He turned to stop her and was struck by the car, which hurled his body to the side of the road, and sped into the darkness.

5 WOMEN HURT IN ROXBURY

Five women were injured late today when the automobile in which they were riding was in collision with another at Heath and Parker sts., Roxbury. A sixth woman escaped injury.

The injured are:

Their car was upset in the crash. They were taken to City Hospital in police ambulance. Police of Station 10 are investigating.

Lima, Peru, Sept. 1 (AP)—Violent earthshocks rocked this city at 1 a. m. today, driving inhabitants into the streets.

WINE BRICK BAN IN N. HAMPSHIRE

Concord, N. H., Sept. 1—New Hampshire barred the sale of wine bricks today.

Chemical analysis of six products of as many companies showed them to be contaminated by mold and yeast, State Chemist Charles D. Howard announced.

Until further tests, sale of the bricks will be illegal, he said. He construed mold and yeast as additeration under a section of the food and drug act.

"Mold and yeast are a definite indication of insanitary methods of preparation and packing," he stated.

Sale of the bricks will be followed by arrest and prosecution, he warned.

The ruling brought dismay to the ranks of grocers and druggists, many of whom had put in large stocks of bricks recently following the Attorney-General's State decision that the bricks did not violate the prohibition law.

Cupid's Helpers

Dr. Albert B. Plater is the man who directs the American Friendship Society in Detroit, through which "Bluebeard" Powers got in touch with his love victims. Otherwise he is a maker of cosmetics and beauty accessories.

CONSTANCE IS HEAVY LOSER

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Constance Bennett, screen actress, returned from France on the liner Paris today. The Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudray also was a passenger.

Asked if they would be married in December, the marquis, who is awaiting a final decree of divorce from Gloria Swanson, said:

"It is customary for the lady to set the date."

Miss Bennett said her losses at Monte Carlo were heavier than she would have liked them.

Six Aliens Dropped on Newton Project

Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton announced today that contractors working on the new city hall on Commonwealth ave. at Walnut st. had been ordered to discharge six laborers because the Unemployment Relief Committee of that city had found they were aliens.

He said the contractors had agreed to discharge them immediately. They are union men and residents of Newton, he said.

Dreamer Hurt in Leap Off Piazza

Edward O'Brien, 19, of Maywood st., Roxbury, is at City Hospital suffering from a possible fracture of the skull, a punctured eyeball and a lacerated eyebrow as the result of falling 35 feet in the rear of his home early today.

Police say O'Brien, who was sleeping on the third floor rear porch, leaped over the railing as the result of a dream, and landed on a picket fence.

400 Regulars on Hike Into Maine

Rochester, N. H., Sept. 1 (AP)—Four hundred regular army soldiers, members of Cos. H, E, F and G, 5th Inf., broke camp early today.

'COW-FACE' CAUGHT GIRLS IN HIS SNARE

GRETA EICHER

Here are the two girls of Mrs. Asta B. Eicher, who was put in Powers' death pit, half-starved and then slain. The girls suffered the same fate, as did their brother Herbert, who was bashed with a hammer while fighting to save them. In their little social affairs the two girls entertained with ballet dances. (International Newsreel photo.)

"And that's all," said the Butcher, as he signed the confession that he had killed two women love dupes and three children. Sheriff Grimm took the confession and locked Powers in a cell. (International Newsreel photo.)

GIRL'S SCREAMS SCARE BANDITS

A girl's scream frightened away two youthful gunmen today who attempted a hold-up in the office of Harry Van Iderstein, Somerville realtor at Union sq.

After a chase through Union sq., Alderman Stephen Cronin grabbed both giving the name of John Doran, 20, of Highland ave., Somerville and held him until police of the Somerville station arrived. A second man got away.

Police say two young men entered the office and Doran who had a gun "covered" Van Iderstein. They didn't see the girl but she saw them.

Girl Flier Learned With Broomstick

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Charlotte Hodgkinson, 19, who took her first flying lesson and solo flight, one day after two hours and 27 minutes of instruction, taught herself the theory of flight with a broomstick.

Her mother said the girl became enamored and made a perpendicular jump at Roosevelt Field. Then after intensive training in her home-made cockpit, with a broom handle at the control stick, she went to Curtiss airport, Valley Stream, for instruction.

MAIL-ORDER SWEETIES WROTE UNAWARE OF FIEND'S DEEDS

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 1—Unaware that the man of their love dreams had already murdered two women and three children, three women continued corresponding with Harry F. Powers, known to his mail order sweethearts as Cornelius Pierson.

The were:

Mrs. Bessie G. Storrs, of Ogden, N. Y.

Miss Edith D. Simpson, of Detroit, Mich.

Miss Virginia Bell, of Hagerstown, Md.

YOU AND LOVE, DEAR

On July 21, Mrs. Storrs wrote to Powers, protesting her love and mentioning plans for their marriage, which "Connie" had at one time set for Aug. 26. The letter said:

"Connie Dear: Do you realize that three weeks of July have passed with today? The summer is half gone. Winter will soon be upon us again and dear, I must make different arrangements before another winter. Honey, I have stayed here for several months waiting for you, Dear. I am greatly worried, I don't know what to do.

"Dear, I have stayed home waiting for you—because I believe you will come to me as soon as your Clarksburg work is over—yesterday was Monday—no mail at all from you—today is Tuesday—the morning's mail has passed—no word from you—I have read and read your telegram, 'quiet your nerves, dear, everything is O. K.'

"I have read and read over your letter, 'I cannot do without you, honey, as do not worry. Always you, Connie.'

"Darling Connie, I can never do without you, either. Honey, if you will stay by me when I need you much, I shall never be able to do enough for you.

"I am well—except my nerves are all upset over you and I cannot overcome my feelings. I try, God knows I try to overcome my feelings, but, Honey, I cannot think of anything but just you. And I know I will collapse if I lose you—entirely.

"I'M GOOD, HONEY"

"Honey, if you have changed your mind about me, and don't want to marry me now, why, dear, we can be friends.

"Connie, I want love, I want you, dear, to write to me and tell me that you will stay by me and be my friend.

"Honey, dear, you told me to stay at home, be a good girl and wait for you. All this I have done since I promised you to do it last March. Now, what do you want to do with me—marry me or turn away from me?

"Life Would Be Complete With You," Widow Wrote

"God may strike me dead if I am not telling you the truth. I have been here waiting for you for months. I have used the last penny that either my mother or I have in the bank, because I wanted to stay here and wait for you.

"Connie, if you will stick to me now and be my friend and advise me what to do, dear—please. There will never be another misunderstanding. Darling, let's be honest with each other, come to Olean and we will then know if we will be married. Love,

"BESSIE."

HER SECOND TRY

Mrs. Storrs, as puzzled by Powers' abrupt decision to end their romance, left a letter mailed July 28 she tells him of her lonely life and how she looks forward for him to bring romance into her life.

Her hopes were high because her first husband, who died in 1929, came to her 15 years before as the result of a matrimonial bureau correspondence similar to that she was carrying on with Powers.

The letter said:

"Dear Connie—Honey, do you realize what it will mean to me if you fail me? Of course, you are going to be true to your word and write me latter part of this week. I am wondering what it is all about. You are a man of wisdom and understanding—you realize my situation.

"I have thought until I can't think. I am a well woman and idleness is killing me by inches. If I had a life filled with interesting things to do I would be happy. If you ever come to Olean . . . oh well then know there is nothing here for me. I love to work and I love to enjoy life and if I had you, life would be complete. I love to travel—and I know you do—for you are traveling most all the time.

"I haven't been any further away than Buffalo and Rochester since 1927—and Buffalo is two hours' ride on the train and four hours to Rochester.

Woman Thought Bluebeard Would Be Her Ideal Man

"And I had nothing but disappointments in meeting men—until you came into my lonely life. And I have caused you to be discouraged with me.

"Honey, a person in your situation doesn't realize what it means to be in a condition like I am at present. You have sort of health, and if you want to go any place you can go, for you have plenty of this world's goods.

"I couldn't go anywhere unless I got married to you. And that is what I am looking to do. Your letters have been wonderful.

"I am really better looking than my pictures. The pictures show only the outline of a certain face. They don't show the expression on my face if I could really see you. I am a woman that you would be proud to have your friends meet—because I know how to act to suit the occasion, that you will tell me when you are coming to take me away—forever. I hope and trust that—everything is all right.

"I don't expect you to marry me until you are convinced that I am all that I say I am. I can talk with anybody. I am fearless, free, healthy, and alright—when I am in my proper sphere where I naturally belong and certainly I belong with the class I've been in here in this town. You would be surprised to see how nice I could be when I am happy.

"I'll close now and pray to soon be lifted out of this rut, bye-bye. Write, dear, real soon,

"Yours always, with love,—

BESSIE."

THE CODE BOOK WORDS

One paragraph in a letter written by Powers to Mrs. Simpson, unmailed because of his arrest, read as follows:

"No darling, I'll say right here that a man with brains and ability to attain the fortune a man can, I'll never make a drunken fool out of myself, standing for a lot of wise cracks from a fat, flabby-faced night club hostess who stands by like a Simon Legree in skirts, lip-lashing her skinny cabaret girls to strut their stuff like so many blood hounds amid the cracked ice."—

Spinster Playfully Wrote Kidnap Threat to Powers

This was a verbatim extract from an article dealing with murder, assault and insanity as the result of liquor.

The original article was entered in the code book of Powers. Its number indicating that it had been sent to a certain number of women including Mrs. Simpson and Miss Bell.

The letter, dated August 23, from Miss Bell to Powers, follows:

"WHEN YOU COME!"

"Your dearest letter ever came yesterday and did it make me happy. Maybe I can show you just how happy it made me when you get here, but I just cannot put it on paper. And was I thrilled just too much to write a long letter to you when you get here, oh, my!

"Now I want to tell you dearie before you come not to expect to find me living in a mansion, for as I told you from the beginning that I am only a working girl and have always lived within my means and I can truthfully say that I owe not any man. I am a good girl and that should count more than riches.

"Remember you will be on strange grounds. There may be a possibility of you being kidnaped, only by a girl that I hope you will like.

"Remember I shall be delighted to see you, so let nothing stand in your way. And I hope that August 27 will always be a red letter day for us. So let me hear, dear, and until then, as always,

DOG A FATAL FRIEND

Wee-Wee, a pet dog shown being held by Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, was the unwitting cause of her fatal friendship with Harry F. Powers, Blueheard of Clarksburg, W. Va. Wee-Wee is a Pomeranian, owned by Mrs. Edgewood Whitin, wife of millionaire mill owner of North Uxbridge. It was Wee-Wee that brought about Mrs. Lemke's first meeting with Powers in a Fredericksburg, Va., hotel. Powers showed interest in the dog as Mrs. Lemke was giving the animal an airing.

the same calibre 7m the body of Mary Baker. A ballistic expert will compare the two sets of bullets.

Investigators are checking the names of 50 Detroit women, listed with the American Friendship Society from which Powers obtained the names of his victims.

Powers joined the organization eight months ago and received four monthly lists containing the names of 1200 women.

Today Sheriff Grimm ordered a gang to resume digging in the well behind the Powers garage.

"Doctor" Jerome Wesniewski, N. T. (Nature Therapist) arrived on the scene, with a contrivance for testing energy, and began trying various spots to locate more bodies.

Wesniewski claimed the pendulum of the magnetic compass on his device swung madly over a soft piece of ground. The workers immediately began digging into the spot.

WIFE CAN FEED HIM

While precautions were taken to guard Powers, the prisoner seems in good spirits. He eats heartily and his wife, Mrs. Louella Powers, was told that she might bring food to him.

Police had found letters which indicate that Powers met his wife through mail order methods, although the woman has denied she met her husband by such an agency.

One letter, that police said was written by Mrs. Powers, was addressed to Harry Powers, Crestline, Ohio, and was dated June 26, 1926.

Investigation showed Powers married the woman June 4, 1927, in Oakland, Md. The license bore the name of Harry Frederick Powers, 42, civil engineer, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Sheriff Grimm said Mrs. Powers reiterated denial that she knew anything of her husband's correspondence with other women. She said she knew he was building a garage at Quiet Dell, on property she leased, but she had never seen it.

Meanwhile, Judge John Southern conferred with Prosecutor Morris and it was decided that Powers would not be arraigned until the regular November session of the grand jury.

Speeding the expected march of Powers to the hangman's noose, Coroner Goff ordered an inquest into the deaths of Mrs. Asta B. Eicher, Ridge Park, Ill. widow; Mrs. Dorothy P. Lemke, another widow from Northboro, Mass., and the three children of Mrs. Eicher. These were the known toll to date of the Powers' slaughter house in Quiet Dells.

"LONG RIDE" FOR WIFE

Among other developments today in the "slaughter house murders" was the revelation that Powers had employed a lawyer early in 1928 to obtain a power of attorney giving him authority to sell the property of his wife, Mrs. Louella Powers, and her sister, Eva Bell Strother. There was some legal difficulty, however, and the papers were still pending.

Further suspicion that his wife and sister-in-law were also marked for death by the self-confessed wholesale murderer was reflected in a statement by a local automobile dealer. The latter reported a conversation with Powers when the love Romeo purchased a new automobile.

"I'm going to take my wife and my sister-in-law for a long ride," said Powers.

And at various times both women were urged by Powers to take out insurance.

"I suppose we both should be thankful we are here," said Miss Strother, the sister-in-law.

FILMED HIS VICTIM

A grim record of Mrs. Lemke's "last ride" was produced in the development of a roll of film found among the effects of Powers.

There were three pictures of the Massachusetts woman and three of Powers. Each had apparently snapped the pictures while the other one posed.

The woman wore the same dress and bobbed, peculiar bob, which was found on her body, buried with the other victims in a trench beside the murder garage.

The photographs were taken along the road between Fairmont and Clarksburg, apparently while Powers was bringing the widow from her home in Northboro, Mass.

There was a look of ecstasy on the face of Mrs. Lemke, who little knew that she was posing for death, yet known.

JOY THE HOPE, DEATH IS GOAL OF LOVELORN

take care of them, and, of course, in time I would see that the lady would also get good care in return.

Or "affectionate" . . . .

So. Boston, Mass.—A widower by death. American of four generations, 55 years old, brown hair, shabby gray, 5 ft., 4 in. in height, weight 132 pounds, fair looking and a home lover, easy to get along with, sincere and exceptionally affectionate, very broad-minded, modern and neat and up-to-date dresser. Desires to become acquainted with a lady that lives in Boston or vicinity. I admire a nice form above good looks.

Or maybe scarcinous . . . .

Rodad, Me.—I am 30 years of age, 5 ft., 10 in. tall, weight 195 pounds, and in perfect physical condition, love outdoor life and spend most of my time in the Maine woods doing clerical work. I would like to meet a girl about my own age, or a few years my senior for matrimonial purposes if she is wealthy.

But they're all human.

But the letters are all human. The desires are all human.

Yet every once in a while comes a tale of startling inhumanity that bazes out of his seemingly gentle warmth of desire.

A tale like that of the fiendish death of Powers' victims, that shocks and revolts and terrifies.

But the outrage of wedding bells and orange blossoms lures them on and on.

"Send your 25 cents for the pair. Send your ten cents for the key numbers. Send your stamps for an answer."

Send your message, lonely heart. You may meet life.

Or death . . .

Powers planned to obliterate his graveyard just as carefully as he had planned months before the construction of the chamber of horrors beneath the isolated garage in which his five victims were slaughtered en masse.

It was learned that the murderer had secretly employed a farmer to sow a crop of rye, which would disguise the ground where the bodies of his victims were huddled.

Mrs. Lemke Cashed Two Checks for $3787

Worcester, Sept. 1—Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, one of the victims of Harry F. Powers, "Bluebeard," of Quiet Dells, W. Va., had at least $4,287.22 with her when she started on her "wedding" journey with Powers.

Officials of the Worcester County Institution for Savings announced today that the woman closed her account on July 28, the same day that she closed one at the Mechanics Savings Bank.

A check for $3754.22 came back a week later, cashed at the Second National Bank of Uniontown, Pa., on August 1.

This was the same place where the check for $1,533, issued by the Merchants bank, was cashed. Both bore the endorsement, "A. R. Weaver." Whether this was another name used by Powers is not known.

P.O.Men Check Butcher's 'Love File'

Powers' Letter-Writing Girls in New England Are Being Trailed

Postoffice authorities throughout New England joined today in the nation-wide hunt for other pen-pals victims of Harry Powers, "Confidence" Bluebeard of Clarksburg, W. Va., who already has admitted slaying two women and the three children of one.

As the search for Powers' love correspondents widened in this section, relatives of Mrs. Dorothy Lemke of Uxbridge, latest known victim of the rotund Romeo, arranged for the removal of her body from the southern town where she had gone only three weeks ago as Powers' expectant bride.

LOVE FILE CHECKED

An elaborate filing system, uncovered in a search of Powers' effects, indicated that the fiendish writer of love letters numbered countless women among his correspondents in addition to those found.

It was regarded as certain that names of other New England women would be found in the files and postoffice officials here are ready to act on receipt of information from federal officers handling the investigation in Clarksburg.

Tragedy and humor stalked hand in hand through the pages of letters sent to Powers in reply to his plaintive queries for a life partner.

Spinsters, divorcesse, widows and young girls—all answered the honeyed phrases which the love butcher clipped from the works of romantic writers and adapted to his own ghastly use.

He wooed Mrs. Lemke with quotations from the writings of Havelock Ellis and wound up by mailing her the entire book, with others he selected from the works of reputed sex experts.

He devised a system of love-making which enabled him to apply a different "treatment" to each correspondent. He was an avid reader of the matrimonial chart of the American Friendship Society of Detroit. And he was undoubtedly the most adept respondent ever to wield a pen for the soothing of the forlorn.

ARREST SAVED HER

How well he couched his terms of endearment is best illustrated in an epistle forwarded to him by Miss Virginia Bell, a spinster of Hagerstown, Md.

Miss Bell "had a date" to go riding with Powers on the night of August 27 but, fortunately for Miss Bell, he was arrested that evening charged with the murder of Mrs. Asta B. Eicher and her three children.

Miss Bell, it appears, had frequently written to the flabby-faced little man in Clarksburg and by June 15 of this year had reached a point where she hoped some day "to ride beside him in the Memorial Day parade."

She had never seen the love butcher but he had often described himself as a former army officer who had won a batch of medals for himself on the battlefields of France.

In one of her fervid letters Miss Bell expressed the hope that one day she would be at his side along the line of march and hear with him the cheers of the populace.

PINED FOR SWEETIE

One of Miss Bell's letters shows her to be a middle-aged woman of varying emotions. In turn she wanted to be loved as a wife, hugged and kissed as a sweetheart, and then she described her own parade-leading activities in her own home town.

Then she wrote of her liking for a "sensible movie" and a quiet evening at home with a "sensible book." Also, of her passion for a right of hilarity "once in a while."

But most of all, it seems, she wanted to help "Connie," the confessed slaughterer, "find his shirt." On June 15, last, she wrote in parts

Dearest Connie:

"I am getting more anxious every day, dearie. I could stand a good bit of loving if I were your wife and right now a lot of hugging and kissing as your sweetheart. Now, does that listen good?

"I am very loving but I must like a person or I can't make anything of them. Maybe some day you will be asking your sweetie where your shirt is. Now, my poor Connie has to hunt his own shirt, but possibly some sweet day I will have that pleasure.

"I often wish I could see through space. If so I would often take a peep at you. Maybe if you phoned some time I could hear what your voice sounds like. Did you ever think of that? Write me another long letter soon. Love and kisses to my darling Connie, from 54 Winter st., Hagerstown, Md.

"VI."

ARREST BLOCKED DATE

It is doubtful whether Powers' list of correspondents would be as large if all could have realized Miss Bell's wish to "peep" at him.

He is dumpy-looking person, inclined to pudginess, watery of eye and not half the prepossessing personality that his gushing letters proclaimed him to be.

However, Miss Bell's quoted letter was marked by Powers with his code number that indicated the mail romance between them was looking up and that a personal visit was in the offing.

In reply to this note the lethal Lothario arranged an evening of motoring with Miss Bell but the date was called off by his arrest.

IT LOOKS LIKE A HARD WINTER, THEY SAY, BUT we were told a secret the other day that will keep US from worrying. Did you know that wheat was recently discovered to be the perfect food—every known vitamin, calory and what you would have is contained in wheat and it is going to sell for 35 cents a bushel this winter. Now, if a bushel of wheat will feed five people for five days for 35 cents, we for one are going on a diet of raw wheat before we start looking careworn, and if you would rather worry than eat wheat go to it.

The average American is too well-fed looking, anyway, and that includes US and Nat Niles, whom we saw skating last winter and we have forgotten to mention it until now. He can't expect to go through every winter picking off all the prizes unless he retains his boyish figure, and that goes for his skating partner also. In fact, we hear that Nat and Theresa are skating on pretty thin ice right now, and they have been looming so large on the horizon there may be a crash. Not that Mrs. Nat gives a cherry-blossom, she prefers shoes to skates, anyway.

They are taking their son, John, with them, and will visit another of their children, who lives in England.

SOMEBOLY HAD SOME hard luck this week. The Gregg Bemises of Brookline built a house this year and it was about finished. They were looking forward to moving in this month, and planning a house-warming and all—the r . . of it for their many friends when one night last week they heard the fire bells and dashed from their apartment to see what was the matter. It was the house that Gregg built going up in smoke and flames, and we hear that not a stick was saved. They are now in Conasset and game, too, for they are already planning another house.

CHARITY IS ALREADY looking after the wee ones and many affairs have been given to swell the funds of this popular Boston philanthropy. Open house was held Saturday afternoon for the Boston Speech School for Crippled Children. Members of some of Boston's prominent families took part in the musical program, which included Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Jr., who sang some children's songs, and Miss Lucille Phelan, daughter of the James J. Phelans. Mrs. Higginson fairly radiated happiness in being able to give pleasure to these little unfortunates, and their faces lit up with appreciation and joy as their loved verses were sang for them. Miss Lucille sang "The Little Shepherd's Song" and a Mexican lullaby, "Little Star." Mme. Vinello Johnson and some of her pupils also assisted.

POPULAR IN NORTH SHORE CIRCLES

Howard Sturgis and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Edward Sturgis, who are spending the summer on the North Shore, take an active part in all Essex County social events.

Miss Weeks Is Among Brides This Month

Now that the knots of the spring and summer marriages are securely tied and everyone is happy, we will begin to line up the September and October brides and their blushing bridegrooms.

The first of these series seems to be that of Miss Katherine Weeks, daughter of the Robert Weeks of Brookline, and Mr. F. Williar Andres, at the Church of the Redeemer in Chestnut Hill.

The second comes the next day and is that very much talked about affair of Miss Betty Pope and Mr. Paul Agassiz Shaw. On the 10th these two popular members of the younger set will stand at an improvised altar in the Manchester summer home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Linder Pope.

Saltonstall-Watson

The next matrimonial plunge on the program will fall on the 22d, and will be that of Miss Katherine Watson, daughter of the Lester Watsons of Chestnut Hill, and William Saltonstall. Miss Watson has just returned from Marion where she was maid of honor last Friday when Miss Eleanor Hoyt became Mrs. A. Felix du Pont. Mrs. Du Pont will return the compliment by filling the same role for Miss Watson, her cousin, when she returns from her wedding trip.

Four days later, Miss Anne Robbins will plight her troth to Mr. Hiram Sibley of Rochester, in King's Chapel. Miss Robbins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bradford Robbins, of Marlborough st.

That same day, the 26th, brings the marriage of the vivacious and talented Miss Sally Wambolt, whose engagement to Mr. Philip Chapman Barney was the first REAL surprise we've had in ages, in the Leslie Lindsay Memorial Chapel of Emmanuel Church.

October Weddings

October, always a popular month with brides (perhaps its the color schems that appeals), is just as full. The 3rd seems to be the date for the first wedding and brings the marriage of Miss Eleanor Mason and Mr. Edward Timothy Buxton in the Ascension Memorial Church in Ipswich, with a reception at the summer home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Herbert W. Mason of Ipswich and Boston.

The next is on the 10th, and is the date chosen by Miss Marguerite Swann and Mr. Percy Musgrave, Jr., for their wedding in St. Paul's Church, Stockbridge, where Mr. and Mrs. John Butler Swann, her parents, make their summer home at the "Nunnery" (not such an appropriate name now) and where the reception will take place.

Two days later on the 12th, Miss Harriet Morse, popular Vincent Club president, will exchange marriage vows with Mr. George Putnam Sturgis in one of those lovely little old churches in Milton.

The 17th holds out for two weddings, that of Miss Betty Bird and Mr. William O. Clark in the little stone Episcopal Church in Framingham, where both make their home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Parker Towle.

Fall Frocks Are Like Suits

By ANN ARDEN

THAT FIRST fall street dress looms large as an interesting wardrobe factor of the near future.

THE NEWER fall street dresses are made of light wools, but these fabrics have very much of a surface to them. They are nubbly, though loosely woven. They have a texture that is most pleasant, and they are not at all overheating even for the first cool days.

THE BLACK frock with white details, and the slanting line, with side termination are but two of the many style points evident in the effective costume pictured. Fashioned of Chelita, a fine wool, the two piece softly tailored frock has a slim line skirt, its overblouse with yoke top merging to raglan shoulders, and well shaped peplum about the hips. White bengaline marks the surplice line closing, terminating in an obtrusive bow at the waistline. Deep cuffs of the bengaline are caught with nickel button links, while the belt is of flexible nickel sections.

THE AGNES beret is of black felt, folded to pointing and dipping line. A cascade of natural coque feathers left side is caught with bow of the felt.

MAYORS IN LINE TO CONTEST AUTO RATES

Mayor Casassa of Revere started mayoral protests by appealing to Governor Ely today to call a special session of the Legislature to consider the proposed increase in compulsory auto insurance rates.

"I am preparing a letter to the governor asking him to call a special session of the Legislature about this proposed increase," Mayor Casassa said.

"The only real way to get a fair, equitable rate is to have the law changed. I think it is an outrage that people who never have accidents should be forced to bear the brunt of such a tax.

"Before we had this hodgepodge law, which is making quack doctors and fake lawyers rich, we had an insurance rate that was fair, low, and could be paid by the average person."

While Mayor Casassa was preparing his letter to Gov. Ely, mayors and leaders in other cities were equally indignant in their remarks.

Their comments follow:

MAYOR JOHN J. WHALEN, of Chelsea: The new insurance rates will be a tremendous burden to the automobile owners of this city. Until it is ascertained the total amount of money paid out in claims to Chelsea auto owners as compared with the premiums paid insurance companies, I have no other statement to make but this: If the careful drivers of this city must carry the burden and suffer for the reckless ones, then the latter must be removed from the highways.

MAYOR EDWARD H. LARKIN of Medford—Look at the safety record of Medford. For this reason I cannot understand the enormous increase in our rates. Medford motorists are paying enough right now, and I intend to study the rates closely before determining what course of action I will take.

MAYOR WILLIAM A. HASTINGS, of Malden—I don't know just what to say about the proposed increase. I can't accustom myself to the idea that just because I happen to live in Malden I am penalized with a group of people who lived in the same zone, and who have repeated accidents. Something must be done.

MAYOR J. FRED MANNING OF LYNN—The action of the commissioner in arriving at the new increase for this district is ridiculous. Lynn's car owners suffer to the extent of more than $150,000 by these haphazard methods. We shall be represented at the hearing on September 11, and they must show cause why this city should take such an outrageous burden caused by the new rates.

MAYOR RICHARD M. RUSSELL, Cambridge: The announced increase in compulsory insurance rates as they affect the city of Cambridge is an outstanding indication of the inequitable manner in which the present system is being made to operate. More than that, the ignoring public that passes over Cambridge streets does not live here. A large majority of the accidents which occur in Cambridge involve persons who do not live in Cambridge.

MAYOR JOHN J. MURPHY of Somerville—That concerted action may be taken in regard to the outrageous increase in automobile insurance rates, I have called a meeting of the Federation of Municipalities within the Metropolitan district for Wednesday, September 9. We will also circulate a petition against the rates.

DEMERIT SYSTEM BACKED BY AUTO MEN

A. T. HART FRED A. ORDWAY CHESTER I. CAMPBELL
F. A. HURCLIFFE A. A. LAWTON

JOHN H. McALMAN, Chairman. CHAS. E. FAY, President. A. L. DANFORTH, Vice-President.

The Boston Automobile Club favors the demerit system of insurance rates for automobiles. A special meeting of its members will be held in the near future to discuss methods of fighting the proposed increase. These men are expected to take the lead in the coming fight for an improvement in conditions. They are on the board of directors.

AUTOISTS FIGHT INCREASE

monwealth must establish the demerit system, so called, whereby the careless driver is required to pay a higher premium than the careful driver.

"If this system is not placed upon our statute books, then the next step must be some form of state insurance. An examination of the rates published by the Insurance commissioner indicates very clearly that he has in mind the imposition of larger rates upon those who can least afford to pay higher rates, the small car owner.

"Many of our car owners with large families are barely able to maintain a small automobile to take their families into the country for a breath of fresh air. These car owners are the ones who are being penalized.

READY TO FIGHT

"In Boston the owner of a Ford car is increased 58. The owner of a medium priced car is increased also, while the owner of a Pierce-Arrow or a Rolls-Royce is increased but $1.

"As long as the public remain dormant and public opinion is not aroused, just so long will the insurance rates be increased. I have directed the corporation counsel, Samuel Silverman, to appear at the hearing to protest against these increases and to call to the attention of the public the unfairness of the present statutory situation, as well as the inequality of the rates established.

"The singling out of the owners of the low-priced cars for an increase eight times as great as that imposed on the owners of the higher-priced cars is unquestionably predicated upon the belief that if the imposition were reversed the opposition would be too formidable.

ELY SILENT FOR NOW.

"If the corporation counsel of each municipality in the State will co-operate with the corporation counsel of Boston, an audacious, unwarranted and outrageous rate upon those who can least afford an increase in taxation will be prevented."

Governor Ely, resting at some undesignated spot in the Berkshires, talked with DeWitt DeWolfe, his secretary, over the telephone today, and said anent the new rates:

"I have nothing to say concerning the tentative schedule of rates at the present time. I may have something to say later in the week; possibly nothing to say before next week."

Mayors of cities, heads of civic bodies, leading automobile clubs led the fight which will terminate at the State House when a public hearing is held on September 11.

A million automobile drivers throughout every section of the commonwealth, after staggering under the first blow, signified their intentions to battle the proposed increase to a finish.

The Boston Automobile Dealers Association will fight the new rates in a finish, according to Chester I. Campbell, secretary.

"Motorists are being ignored when conferences are called by the commissioner when new rates are being considered," he declared.

LAW CALLED JOKE

Corporation Counsel Silverman, who will represent the city at the hearing, entered his attack on the compulsory insurance law and termed it a "joke." Former Registrar Frank A. Goodwin declined to discuss the case until he had seen the full report, but asserted he could be present at the meeting.

4 PER CENT JUMP

In a statement issued last night, Commr. Brown stated the increase averaged about 11 per cent for passenger and commercial cars. However, the increase is much higher in many Greater Boston cities and towns, the figures running as high as 4-6 per cent in some sections.

Malden, for example, with the rate on small cars jumping from $32 to $46, shows an increase of nearly 41 per cent. Medium and high priced cars face a corresponding rate increase.

Chelsea and Revere show very large increases. In Chelsea the figures propose increases of $23, $25 and $34 for low, medium and high-priced cars, respectively.

$61 BOSTON'S LOWEST

The Boston increase is also large. Owners of low and medium priced cars will pay an increase of $8 under the new figures, making the rates $61 and $65. Owners of high-priced cars will pay only $1 more than in 1931, the rate being $67 instead of $66.

Melrose and Newton are about the only Greater Boston cities which will not be affected greatly by the new figures. Everett auto owners will pay increases of $9 on small cars, $11 on medium and $13 on high-priced machines.

Increases of $3 to $5 will prevail in Cambridge, Somerville and Winthrop, according to the type of auto. In Brookline the increases would be $7 on low-priced cars, $5 for medium and $8 for the high-priced models.

FEW REDUCTIONS

Outside the Greater Boston area, car owners in many cities would fare better under the tentative schedule. New Bedford and Haverhill, according to the proposed listing, would have no increase in rates in the low-priced cars and would have a reduction of $4 in premium rates for each of the two higher groups.

The fact that 18 zones or territories in the state were laid out in the proposed schedule in place of the eight of last year also makes comparison difficult. Many cities and towns have been grouped with others in which auto accidents were more numerous in 1930 than 1929.

The schedule of rates of the State Insurance Commissioner are based on the 1930 auto accident records, the last full year for which such figures are available.

SUBJECT TO CHANGE

In his statement, Commissioner Brown pointed out that losses and expenses for 1930 exceeded the premiums earned, necessitating the increased rates.

The schedule is subject to such changes as information presented at the hearing and during subsequent investigation warrants.

The proposed schedule also presents increased rates for electric commercial cars and motorcycles. Rates for electrics run from $58 in Territory 1 to $11 in Territory 18. Motorcycle rates run from $143 to $34 in the same territories.

Commercial cars and trucks have a different classification in the 18 territories, but show a big increase in the rates, going from $152 for heavy trucks in Territory 1 down to $16 for light vehicles of the fourth class in Territory 8.

AUTO DEALERS TO FIGHT

Vigorous opposition to the new insurance rates was registered by the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association today, and the association promised every aid to motorists in bringing about a change in the present law.

Chester I. Campbell, secretary of the association, issued the following statement:

"At a meeting of the board of directors held today, a decided stand was taken in opposition to the new compulsory insurance rates."

"It is felt that the motorists have been ignored and sidetracked and we are not aware of any conference of motoring interests that the commissioner has called to discuss or explain the action on his part.

"These new rates will be contested, not for any one group or section, but for the entire state."

Campbell then issued a statement which included his own feelings.

"This whole matter seems to be getting ready for a united drive against the compulsory law in this state this fall. There must be something wrong, when other states, which have always held up the laws of Massachusetts as models, have refrained from adopting the compulsory insurance law."

New officers of the association were elected today. They included Charles E. Fay of the C. E. Fay Company, president; John H. MacAlman, chairman of directors; A. L. Danforth, vice-president; Chester I. Campbell, secretary for his 30th consecutive year, and F. A. Hinchcliffe, treasurer.

The new board includes the officers and A. E. Hart, F. J. Ordway, O. A. Lawton and H. K. Noyes.

Davis on League Board

50 WAR PLANES THUNDER IN SKY DANCE

Cleveland, O., Sept. 1 (AP)—Fifty thundering fighters staged a war dance through the skies today in observance of Army Day at the national air races.

The 50, flying in groups and in mass, in echelon or stairstep formation, stormed out of the northwest and low over the field with their 500-horsepower engines and propellers roaring an ear-splitting din, to circle, roll, loop and turn in every formation in the military catalog.

The fighters were from the first army pursuit group at Selfridge Field, Mich., under command of Major Gerald Brower.

Speed also shared the program for some of the fastest planes in the air races were sent through tryouts for the Thompson trophy race to be run next Monday. The entrants are determined to break the world speed record for land planes, set in 1924 in France at 278.5 miles an hour.

In the handicap she led a field of 51 men and women aviators, winning the grand prize as well as the prize for women. She scored 108.19 points, while D. C. Warren of Alameda, Cal., who won the men's division of the race, was given 103.5 points.

Lee Brusse of Glendale, Cal., took third place with 101.84.

Second place in the women's division was awarded to Mrs. Martie Bowman of Glendale, with 98.08 points. Miss Mae Haizlip, Ferguson, Mo., 98.90, was third.

Bad Weather Holds Back Los Angeles-Cleveland Race

Los Angeles, Sept. 1 (AP)—Because of poor weather conditions over Arizona, New Mexico and the Middlewest, the eight nationally known aviators entering in the Los Angeles-Cleveland air race postponed their take off scheduled for today and set Wednesday morning tentatively.

The fliers here for the speed race to Cleveland and possibly to New York are: J. H. Doolittle, St. Louis; Capt. Ira Eaker, United States Army; James Hall, New York; Walter J. Hunter, Robertson, Mo.; Beeler Blevins, Atlanta, Ga.; Col. Arthur Goebel, Los Angeles; Harold Johnson, Chicago, and Louis Biechers, Arlington, N. J.

$2500 for the Flier Breaking Hawks' Record

Burbank, Cal., Sept. 1 (AP)—Seven pilots entered in a free-for-all air dash to Cleveland have a new incentive.

BELGIAN TRIED AS FASCIST FOE

Rome, Sept. 1 (AP)—Lee J. Moulin, young Belgian professor arrested here last April on charges of anti-Fascist activity, went on trial today before a special tribunal for defense of the state.

He acknowledged he had brought from Belgium a false bottom trunk, in which he kept information gathered in Italy for friends, but disavowed any intention of offending the Italian government.

One of the friends for whom he gathered information, he said, was Giovanni Rassanesi, anti-Fascist aviator, who flew from Switzerland a year ago to drop propaganda over Milan.

Bottle Not "Clue" to Judge Crater

Toledo, O., Sept. 1 (AP)—A message written on the joker of a card deck and purporting to be from the missing Judge J. F. Crater, New York justice, was sent to New York today for comparison of handwriting.

Fire Capt. Charles J. Sedgwick said a woman handed him the card last night and asked that it be turned over to police. She had found it in a bottle in the Detroit river.

Dean Inge Jokes on His Own Books

London, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, "Gloomy Dean" of St. Paul's, today recommended in a speech at the Library Association convention that physicians prescribe books by certain authors as a cure for insomnia.

"Often," he said, "I have found my wife napping pesefully with one of my own books upside down on her knee."

Device Aids Safety of Navy Aviators

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Navy engineers are working on a device to make it easier for airplane pilots to cheat Davy Jones' locker. It is a valve, operated by water pressure on a diaphragm which automatically inflates flotation gear when a hydroplane is forced down at sea. Now the pilot has to open the valve by hand.

Thief Leaves Judge Landis Stranded With None On

Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout; But there is no joy for Judge— mighty Landis can't come out.

The shame of it all was that, although a one-suit man with two pairs of pants, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high priest of baseball, was without either pair today in what now must be referred to as the Frantic Hours.

They were very frantic hours indeed for the white-haired maestro, for even judicial austerity can crack when a man is alone with his thoughts and his undies—and nothing to do about it but act the floor.

HE'S A BASE STEALER

It all came about because the judge put all his pants in the basket, and sent them to his favorite tailor, Fritz Springer, at 188 West Springfield st., South End, with orders for delivery at 9 a. m.

Springer, with the touch of an artist, sponged and pressed the lengthy judicial draperies and laid them out for delivery. But a chap named George Hamley, caring nothing for baseball, had other plans—and he filched the pants and scampered away, with the frantic Fritz in pursuit.

It would be a muddy street where Fritz tackled Hamley—and the pants splashed in a puddle. And it would be necessary for Fritz to go first to police headquarters to sign a complaint against the filcher before he could go back to work again.

JUDGE GETS 'EM BACK.

And meanwhile, in his apartment hotel room at 78 Commonwealth ave., the wrathful judge paced the carpet in his shorts, with the shapely Landis limbs whipping the vagrant breezes—halting his pacings only to bark, judicially but vainly into a silent telephone.

Hours later, the tardy pants, resplendent again after their tailoring double-header, came back into the eager arms of the high caliph—and baseball's tottering throne was saved.

GANG-HUNTING GUIDES IN N. Y.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Two guides from Maine came to town today in the hope of taking a few pot shots at gangsters, but police showed little interest in their proffered help.

Allie W. Deming if Flagstaff, Me., and Fred York of Stratton had informed Police Commissioner Mulrooney in advance of their arrival, but when they climbed down from the train, knapsacks on backs and rifles in hand, they expressed surprise at not finding the expected police escort awaiting them.

There were reporters and photographers, however, and the guides, whose business it is to lead hunters through the intricate paths of the Maine woods, appealed to the newspaper folk to show them through the confusing city trails.

Both guides denied their journey to New York had anything to do with any publicity scheme or had any motive other than to help out the city folk and incidentally get in a little practice to keep their trigger fingers "warmed up."

VETS PARADE IN KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Sept. 1 (AP)—Martial strains and the tramp of marching feet dominated the program of the 33d annual encampment of the veterans of Foreign Wars here today.

A parade of more than 5000 marchers through Kansas City's downtown section replaced the morning business session of the veterans.

Ernest Lee Jahnke, assistant secretary of the Navy, in an address to the former service men last night urged them to withhold demands for additional federal aid until the economic depression has passed.

Declaring that at no time since the World War have veterans been confronted with so great an opportunity for service to the nation, the assistant secretary said:

"I speak particularly of legislation for the benefit of veterans. You are confronted with the alternative of demanding additional federal benefits at this critical period or holding your proposals in abeyance until the time—not far off, we hope—when increased expenditures would not have a seriously injurious effect upon economic recovery."

Prosecutor Takes Cannon Fund Facts

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Dist. Atty. Rover today requested and received from Chairman Nye of the Senate Campaign Funds Committee the record of the hearings on the use of campaign money by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in 1928.

Rover gave no information as to whether he would go before the grand jury with the case. Senator Nye has referred to the transaction of Bishop Cannon in handling anti-Smith campaign funds of 1928 as amounting to "diversion."

WAR PREDICTED AS WORLD IS OVERPEOPLED

London, Sept. 1 (INS)—The world has become too full and overpopulation may lead to another war, Sir J. Arthur Thomson, eminent biologist, told the British social hygiene council here.

He said the annual increase was 12 to 14 millions and that if it continued it would become necessary to put up "standing room only" notices.

"Some have estimated," he said, "that in the time of great-great grandchildren now living America will be absolutely full and on the verge of a debacle too horrible to think of.

CAN'T STAND PRESSURE

"Historically, many wars have been due to overpressure of population, and there will be another war unless we check this increase."

Differential fertility due to different levels of the community not multiplying at an equal rate is a great drawback to the world he said, explaining:

"The most desirable are multiplying most slowly, and those who contribute most to the race are contributing least towards it as regards offspring.

HEALTH STANDARD LOW

"Because man has formed a society and is a creature of reason he has evaded natural selection. What he should have done was to press forward methods of rational social selection, so the superior would get the benefits of superiority and the inferior would be taxed for inferiority."

Finally, Sir Arthur said, there is a low standard of positive health as the old enthusiasm for physical fitness has not been maintained.

Army Time Bomb Pierces Armament Before Exploding

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Plans and specifications for a small incendiary bomb, designed to pierce armament, have been presented to the army ordnance department by John W. Currell, who gave the United States the aerial explosive bomb now in use.

Currell, a Washington mechanic formerly in the marine corps and navy, also invented the tracer projectile and other devices.

All his inventions have been contributed without compensation. His new bomb weighs but two pounds and is 6½ inches long.

FRANCE FAVORS LEAGUE ARMY

Paris, Sept. 1 (AP)—The French Foreign Office said today the army proposal advanced yesterday by Joseph Paul-Boncour representing the permanent view of the French government on disarmament and security.

This proposal was to place the armed forces of all nations at the disposition of the League of Nations, to be employed against any country that resorts to war in defiance of arbitration.

Aliens Land in N. Y. When Assured There Isn't Any 'War'

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—In New York, the passengers aboard the Italian liner Ronia heard, all was chaos.

"Is there much shooting?" they wanted to know. "Are there many dead? The army—and the carabineers? Aren't they fighting each other in the streets?"

"Aren't women and children being shot down, and all that sort of thing? We heard the military had been called out, and that all was more or less chaos."

When assured there was no chaos the passengers sighed and disembarked.

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

With the romance of Charlie and May Reeves, a Czecho-Slovakian girl of 22, the Boston Evening American concludes its series of Chaplin's loves. Miss Reeves, or Miller as she is known to her intimates, is the last of a long line of beautiful but tragedy-tinged romances of the film comics.

CHAPTER 26

May Reeves' black hair, her great big brown eyes, but most of all her tango, caught Charlie's fancy when he met the young woman at Nice.

The girl, employed as a secretary by Carlyle Robinson, Charlie's personal representative for 16 years, hired her after singling her out of a long line.

She was Robinson's secretary for only three days.

Charlie saw her and casually asked:

"Can she tango?"

She could. Robinson lost his secretary but Charlie gained a dancing partner and let himself in for another romance.

MAY BRING HER OVER

Miss Reeves, born Mala Miller, is a startling brunette with fiery and bewitching eyes and a provocative mouth. She has an enchanting smile and engaging personality.

Today she stands aces in Charlie's affections, with a tug at his heart that is both hard and devastating. But for how long? That's the question that bothers Hollywood, and anxiously they await her coming to the film colony—that is, if she does.

There is some rumor that Charlie will bring her back to this country when he returns, but to date it is only a presumption.

And so Charlie has taken his continental miss tangoing at Frank Gould's dance rendezvous and shown her off as a tangoist of no mean distinction.

Nightly the couple have glided over highly-polished dancing floors tangoing, while an appreciative audience has looked on and applauded.

But when Charlie discovered the Czecho-Slovakian miss so entrancingly beautiful and so delightful a dance partner, well—

Who would resist romance?

May arrived in Nice by the way of the beauty contest route. She was adjudged second prize winner in a beauty contest held at Nice. She speaks in addition to her native tongue, German, French and English.

She is five feet six inches tall and weighs about 120 pounds. And she has Charlie's latest recipe for perfection in womanhood.

So Charlie, because he needed a linguist-secretary, won himself a playmate.

TIME WILL TELL

Robinson was obliged to return to America, but he left Charlie in May's hands.

It may only be a passing fancy. It may be that Charlie wants the tango badly, but, at any rate, May has made the grade and all is well with Charlie and romance.

Time will write the concluding chapter. Hollywood would like to know when.

And so Charlie has partaken of romance. He has found it many times. He has lost it almost as many times.

Blondes, brunettes and redheads, too, have given him happiness, consolation, understanding, but always in their wake they have left tragedy, unhappy moments that have brought moods of silence and introspection to his fevered and nervous soul.

Always artistic, ever the seeker of the beautiful in art and in woman, Charlie has been punished many times.

But he has arisen above it all. He has not allowed his two marriage failures to cloud his life.

A life so hectically colored by success and achievement, must necessarily be tinged with sadness. And the king of the silents has had his share.

But from all his romances, from all his loves, only the memory of little Hetty Kelley, the sweetheart of his boyhood days, remains cherished and sweet.

With but little of worldly goods, he experienced those moments of real happiness that come with companionship with one around whom castles and dreams are so lavishly imagined.

Edna Purviance, Marie Doro, May Collins, Mildred Harris, Clara Windsor, Claire Sheridan, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Lita Grey, Pola Negri, Josephine Dunn—all have given the great Chaplin something, immeasureable, but valuable—something that helped to round out his emotional life and inspire him in his successes.

LEARNED FROM ALL

There have been other romances, week-end affairs. There have been other women, momentary affairs, but from every experience Charlie has learned a lesson.

He has come to the realization that one of his temperament and artistry must not marry. He must love, but he must not bind himself by the responsibilities of marriage.

That Chaplin would love a home and fireside, children, and the other comforts is true. But fate has decreed that the genius of the silents must take romance where he finds it and leave marriage to those men more stable in routine, more even in temperament, more comfortable with simple things.

And, from his ashes of memory, he can resurrect great moments that soon eday can be screened and appreciated.

Charlie's friends are certain he will never again tread the church altar. He, himself, admits future bachelorhood.

Time will answer the understanding in Charlie's heart.

Many times women will be named as possible Mrs. Chaplins. Charlie will be seen frequently with beautiful women.

Women have been his inspiration. He owes much to their companionship, their stimulation, their charm and beauty.

He can blame no one for the tragedy-woman; he can exclaim.

Life is like that. It has been for Charlie Chaplin, the greatest silent filmster the world has ever known.

And so with his baggy trousers, his over-sized shoes and his under-sized hat, his twirling cane and his funny mustache, Charlie will continue to astound the world.

Charlie has understood his "props." And if they could talk, they would tell him, they have understood him.

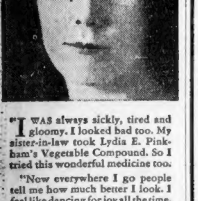
But the real Chaplin, not the real Charlie, no woman has ever understood.

THE END.

'Stage Struck' at Fine Arts

Another German film is twinkling for a week on the screen at the Fine Arts. Reduced to English, its title is "Stage Struck" and presents as its leading player the spirited little Anny Ondra. The story concerns an unsophisticated girl with rather broad stage aspirations. Included in the action are several song and dance numbers. The comedy is as light and frothy as the beer which Mies Ondra draws so deftly for her thirsty customers.

"I feel like dancing"



"I WAS always sickly, tired and gloomy. I looked bad too. My sister-in-law took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I tried this wonderful medicine too.

"Now everywhere I go people tell me how much better I look. I feel like dancing for joy all the time.

"I am happy to tell other women about this medicine." Mrs. V. E. Schnepper, 1409 E. Sycamore St. Evansville, Indiana.

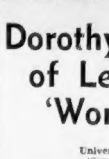
FILMDOM NEWS By Louella O. Parsons «» «» Nicholas Young DISCUSSES STAGE

Dorothy Hall Given One of Leading Roles in 'Working Girl' Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Sept. 1—Time some company signed Dorothy Hall! It's all the fashion to send to New York to get a stage actress to play in pictures yet here they have a talented young woman right at their doorstep. Dorothy created the role of Schatze in "The Greeks Had a Word For It" in the New York production and she played the same part on the stage here.



Louella O. Parsons

She goes to San Francisco next week with the "Greeks" company and when she returns she will play one of the feminine leads in "Working Girl" for B. P. Schulberg.

Buddy Rogers has the male lead. Buddy has turned down a very good job in a Broadway musical comedy but he has no time for the stage now. He is wanted at the studio. Mr. Schulberg has also put Peggy Shannon into the cast and signed Dorothy Arzner to direct, so you see Dorothy Hall makes her screen debut in good company.

How do you feel about Chic Sale? Do you like his characterization of the old man with the wabbly legs or is it youth you crave? One thing about Mr. Sales, there is no half way opinion. Either you like him tremendously or you hope you will never see him again. In "Star Witness," however, the count was about ten to one in favor of Chic. That's the picture that brought him a new two-year contract from Warner Brothers with a six picture schedule. Mr. Sale's very first will be another old man character. He plays the lead in "Old Man Minnick," a stage play by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman and I should not be in the least surprised if this play had not been bought with the "Specialist" in mind.

Seen and Heard

The beauteous blonde, Claire Windsor, who gave Hollywood only a nod and then made arrangements to leave, is reported to have signed a contract with Al Jolson. Claire is to play a part in "Wonder Bar" on the road for Jolson. I am afraid Claire has New York ideas now for she seems to have definitely parted from Hollywood. Lupe Velez, so the rumor goes, will have the leading part in "Salomy Jane's Last Kiss" at Warners. Of course, this is just a bit of gossip but why not gossip and be done with it. The Motion Picture Relief is planning an elaborate radio program this coming season with all of Hollywood's most famous stars, speaking, singing, etc. But more about it later.

Poor Ed Sedgwick has been much the victim of his colleagues realized. He is in St. Vincent's Hospital, suffering a very bad attack of pneumonia. Although he is impatient to be up and at it, his doctor has absolutely forbidden him to direct the football picture at Columbia, starring Jack Holt. Mal St. Clair has been named to take the directorial reins. Let's hope Mal gets back into his old stride.

Well, as I live and breathe, my old friend, Benny Rubin, is going to London. I wonder if London knows it? I suppose he will come back with a topper, a monocle, spats and a cane. He will honor New York by making a visit although New York said if he wanted to sail from Canada it was all right. Benny is going to canvass London. New York and other cities to see if the audiences like songs in pictures. Then if they do he will sing in "Red Suspenders." I forgot to say he is also going to do a vaudeville skit in one of London. If I weren't busy I'd poll a few votes in this column and see whether Benny's fans want him to sing and I'd count them myself. It wouldn't take long.

FILMLAND'S MERRY MERMAID

Film Star Hit at Scollay

Mildred Harris Chaplin came to stage at the Scollay yesterday and in very short order convinced everybody that whatever his vagaries may have been in the matter of temperament, her late Mr. Chaplin had an excellent eye for beauty.

Miss Chaplin—or should it be Mrs. Chaplin—has a vaudeville sketch well suited to her talents. It is mostly in song, although she does range into drama with an impersonation of Marlene Dietrich. This is very nicely done and settled her at once on friendly terms with her audience. Assisting Miss Chaplin is Billy Dougal, incidentally a Somerville boy.

Other features of the Scollay's new variety program include Charles McNally and company, Francisco Foskette, well-liked dramatic soprano, will be soloists at the final Brookline Field concert on Thursday evening, given by the People's Symphony Orchestra, under Will Dodge.

It will be testimonial night for the musicians, for the committee of Brookline citizens which has had charge of the concerts, has arranged a presentation to the conductor before the audience, which is expected to include notables from the town, surrounding cities and the Commonwealth. In addition, the receipts from this concert, which will be the only one of the entire series to which admission is charged, will go toward a fund to be distributed among the musicians. It is expected that thousands, who have enjoyed the concerts during the summer, will seize the opportunity to show their appreciation for the efforts of the musicians, who have realized an inadequate return on their work.

A notable all-request program has been arranged by Mr. Dodge. Miss Buell will repeat the E-flat major Liszt Concerto, while Miss Foskette will sing an aria from Meyerbeer's "Les Huguenots."

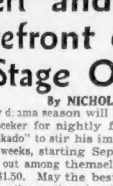
Gilbert and Sullivan in Forefront of Coming Stage Offerings

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The new dramatic season will hardly get under way before the bewildered seeker for nightly fun will have the choice of two kinds of "Mikado" to stir his imagination and lure his footsteps. For several weeks, starting September 21, Gilbert and Sullivan will fight it out among themselves—in one playhouse at $2, in another at $1.50. May the best show win.

Exactly why these otherwise good showmen, referring to Milton Aborn in one corner and the Messrs. Shubert, in another, choose to turn what ought to be a public benefaction into a free-for-all scramble is not exactly clear. The state of the theater, as everyone knows, does not warrant many adventures that on the face of them give promise of unhappy results to both sides. There is plenty of room, even an aching void, for good entertainment and surely any revival of the Savoy operas must fall into that class. But with these Gilbert and Sullivan purveyors vending their wares on both sides of the street, and probably making faces at each other, the prospects are not especially encouraging.



Nicholas Young

The better known of these battling Savoyans is the Civic Light Opera Co., commanded by Milton Aborn. This organization has been tipping Broadway on its ears since early in May and has tripped through the sweltering Manhattan summer in rare midseason form. It is still doing business in a large way in the Erlanger Theater and will remain there until swallowed up by our own Colonial stage on Sept. 21. The opening bill, of course, will be "The Mikado," to be followed with "Trial by Jury" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," a twin bill; then "Pirates of Penzance" and "Iolanthe." A single week will be given each presentation.

This, you may be told, is the 32 grade of Gilbert and Sullivan, and will be interpreted by such well known songsters as Howard Marsh, William Danforth, Frank Moulan, Herbert Waterous, Vera Ross, Ethel Clark, Fay Templeton and Vivian Hart—every one of them a veteran in Savoyan service.

Across the Common, at the Messrs. Shuberts' Lyric, will be found the $1.50 brand of "The Mikado" and other Gilbert and Sullivan works. Commencing off on Sept. 14, this expedition draws a head start on Mr. Aborn, which is perhaps a fair thing, as it expects to remain in town much longer by reason of its more extended repertoire.

Mr. Frank W. Shea, generalissimo of the Lyric's productions, seems anxious to make additions to his announced program and has let it be known that if folks will write to him of their interest in the matter he will undertake the presentation of several of the lesser known Gilbert and Sullivan pieces. He has in mind "Utopia," "Limited," "The Sorcerer" and "The Grand Duke." These have seldom been done in this country.

NURSING A BABY; WHEN IS IT UNCIVILIZED?

—By Gilbert Seldes—

GILBERT SELDES

IF YOU GET TIRED of the nagging criticism written by Richard Aldington, or even the less solemn Sinclair Lewises, if you think that something surely remains to be said on the side of conservative virtue, what can you do with such defenders of virtue as the New York State Board of Motion Picture Censors?

Making fun of movie censors is tiresome, chiefly because the critics do not attempt to uncover the motives of the censors and also because the censors are funnier than any fun about them can be.

Their latest contribution is: "In barring a scene showing an infant at its mother's breast, the board ruled that the breasts of civilized women may not be shown." (I quote the ruling from Nation.) To me it is as baffling a sentence as I have ever read; it doesn't make sense, backward or sidewise; it is a kind of moral lunacy.

Leaving out the motive, what does the board mean by civilized? Are Lapianders civilized? Are Africans? Are Japanese? Doesn't the board mean, white European and American women? And is the board prepared to prove that we have a monopoly of civilization? Also, what quality in civilization makes the function of nursing a child improper if it is not improper in savages?

Over the studio doors we shall see, henceforth, a sign: Bottle Babies Only. The sentimentalists will protest because some one (not a mother) has told them that bottle-fed babies are not as dearly loved as those nursed at the breast. The board will retort, in noble terms, that civilization leads away from all the natural functions, civilization is an endless fight against nature and, therefore, if we live in a mechanical civilization nature is obviously and necessarily indecent.

One Indecency Perpetrated

On the whole, the board will probably be right. But it is not consistent. Men and women are still permitted to eat in the talkies, although the sound effects are minimized. Yet, there is little in the process of mastication which is not offensive, and for the protection of American womanhood we ought to have none of it. It is bad enough to go into a restaurant and see people boldly eating in public. To perpetuate the indecency on the screen is a crime.

Perhaps one of the best uses of new books is to make us think of old ones. About "The Colonel's Daughter" I was mystified until some one told me that Richard Aldington, the author, considered Samuel Butler a great genius and "The Way of All Flesh" the supreme English novel. Then the mystification disappeared, for not only the style, but the mind in back of "The Colonel's Daughter" is pure Butler. That means that the author stands outside and beats his characters with whips whenever they raise their heads and venture to talk about their morals, their ideals, their love or their virtue.

It is the story of an illiterate daughter of a retired and impoverished army man, a girl who is built to bear children, bu twhose face attracts no man. She passes through loneliness, a partial seduction which shames and excites her and an impassioned love for a man who goes away with some one else. She is left alone, ugly and angry, her only function in life unfulfilled because (you are led to believe) her social sets insists upon legal marriage.

Emotional Chaos, Brutal, Honest

Although the book reads easily enough, it is incoherent with Aldington's emotional chaos. Aldington would be better off if he had no philosophy, or only one; he has them all. The book is brutal, honest and angry. It is published by Doubleday, Doran.

"The Way of All Flesh" is the work of a more mature mind, of one which maintains its calm even when it deals with evils. The Rev. Theobald Pontifex is one of the meanest and most disagreeable characters in fiction, yet in the midst of showing how foully he treated his son, how close he came to wrecking Ernest's life, Butler deliberately stops and in a memorable chapter offers a defense. Pleasure, he says, is the safest test of virtue.

"The devil, in fact," writes Butler ironically, and yet with "kindness," "when he dresses himself in angel's clothes, can only be detected by experts . . . so . . . it is hardly safe to be seen talking to an angel at all, and prudent people will follow after pleasure as a more homely but more respectable and, on the whole, much more trustworthy guide."

Hay Fever

(With Apologies to Masefield's "Sea Fever")

I must go down with the sneeze again, the awful wheeze and the sigh,
And all I ask is a handkerchief to keep my poor nose dry;
And clear ozone and a cooling breeze with the chance to ease my pain,
For I need it all in my struggle as I go down with the sneeze again.

I must go down with the sneeze again, and though I have tried and tried
To keep myself from sneezing, yet a sneeze can't be denied;
And all I ask is a lonely spot by some quiet sylvan dell
Where there are no rag-weed pollen nor golden rod to smell.

I must go down with the sneeze again, but I'll surely do my best
To conquer this dreadful malady, subdue this awful pest;
And all I ask is to hie me away, away from the hay and cluver,

A. H. ELLARD.

Off the Press

—By Idwal Jones—

MORRIS L. ERNST has entitled his little book "America's Primer." This is reassuring to most of us, though who is afraid of sociology nowadays? And in a very slight way he has patterned it after M. Ilin's "New Russia's Primer."

Our great national defect, Ernst affirms, is that we haven't a well-defined plan. We drift about in chaos, our social fabric is full of incongruity and anomaly. Farmers are at their wits' end with wheat down to almost nothing, and a couple million city dwellers need more bread. The price of oil is getting fixed, not by sound economics but by "Alfalfa Bill" Murray.

In the words of the London music-hall ditty, "We dunno where we are." But we do believe in one thing, the unutterable holiness of individuality, of the good old Manchester gospel of laissez-faire.

I know we are supposed to be stupid because we haven't a national plan, and abhor the idea of it, except in war time. I think Stuart Chase's five-year plan is an excellent one, and that even a chartered accountant couldn't pick a hole in it. But it does not appeal to the emotions. It appeals to intelligence, which, as every politician knows, plays a trifling part in the conduct of our affairs. And individuality is, with us, a religion.

No nation, except the Italian and the Russian, has a plan. They have one because their racial mentality inclines them to that sort of thing. Italy, until 1870, was a loose patchwork of feudal states run for profit by bravos of Capone stamp. Her people are still amenable to the feudal idea. Russia, again, chiefly Asiatic, subservient, mystical, with a genius for suffering, and no great dislike for bean soup and jails, would even regard the advent of a Genghis Khan with equanimity. Neither nation has yet had a high regard on individualism.

Kropotkin and Tolstoy, intellectuals, spoke more for the moujik than for the upper classes. Wasn't it Kipling who said that the difference between the moujik and the Muscovite toff was that the latter tucked his shirt in? Though Tolstoy didn't.

This is a book that will be liked. Our appetite for social criticism is enormous. Ernst has a feeling for the epigram and cutting truth, and his malice is humorous. Comments on politics, bankers, citizens — the whole roaring, fascinating show which we enjoy to watch, despite its stupid and perfectly avoidable faults, come jolting as out of a hopper.

It lacks a pattern, as it does a five-year plan, and therefore lacks in design, but if it has no coherency, it makes up for that in stimulating with freshness of ideas.

Real Old English

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

One of those rich, solid novels which so often come out of England is out. It is by Sheila Kaye-Smith, and it is called "Susan Spray." Harpers give it to us under their imprint. In London it has caused no little of a stir, and I predict that in this country it will be discussed for a long time to come.

C. H. TOWNE

It opens in 1834, and covers a period of over thirty years. The scenes are mostly laid in that Sussex country which Miss Kaye-Smith has made peculiarly her own; and even in those remote days we discover that the old evangelical religions had their Aimee McPhersons—women preachers who cried "Hallelujah!" and told of a fiery hell for the wicked.

* * *

Sees God in a Burning Bush

As a little child, Susan Spray is hired out to frighten the birds that clamor over the fields; and in her lonely occupation, she had her first visions of God in the burning bush, and the Holy Ghost in a thunder storm.

Her impoverished parents are members of a strange religious group known as the Colgates —a piteous congregation who help one another when they can; and when the child's mother dies in bearing her eighth child it is she who must keep house for her dissolute father. The little brood seek an ephemeral Canaan, and in their ignorance start out with a tiny cart and a few provisions to find the Promised Land. On the way, the father dies; and, arriving at a small town, the children are placed in the poor house.

Then Susan and her younger sister, Tamar, are released, and their lives begin anew on a farm. Susan has learned to read and write, and the instinct to preach grows within her. The girl Tamar "steps aside," much to Susan's disgust; and her illegitimate child thrives and prospers, while the child of Susan, born in wedlock, lives only a few weeks. Finally her first husband is killed, and Susan preaches as she has never preached before.

Susan marries again, this time a man far above her in social position, and a few stormy years follow, wherein she feels the tug of the flesh, and forgets the grace and salvation she had so ardently taught to a doubting band of followers.

Back With the Faithful

But later the old religious urge conquers her again, and in a dramatic portion of the book she renounces her husband, who is furious at her because she has failed to bring to him the goodly estate of an old man whom Susan had befriended. But she has made up her mind to go back to the winning of souls. Her husband, Clarabut, disappears to America, where the Civil War is at its height, and she considers herself well rid of him.

In most plausible fashion she encounters her sister, Tamar, now prosperously married after many adventures in "sin," and the ties are strengthened between them, the past is forgotten, and it is through Tamar, oddly enough, that she meets a man who is destined to become her third husband—a man, who, like herself, is imbued with the religious spirit, and who causes her to preach again in a lowly part of London and afterwards in the country.

But after this third marriage, she makes the startling discovery that Clarabut is not dead. She is a bigamist, on the eve of the opening of one of her greatest missions. But she girds on her armor and plunges with all her force into the serious business of reclaiming sinners.

No wonder that Miss Kaye-Smith has been hailed as the legitimate successor of Hardy. But she has a bleak yet beautiful style of her own that haunts us long after we have laid the book aside.

My Little Unawakened Heart

NEW EYE 'SEES' ELEMENT 87

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—A new scientific eye which combines the speed of light with magnetism to detect elements as infinitesimal as one part in 100 billion was described to the American Chemical Society today.

The detector is based on a discovery by Dr. Fred Allison of the department of physics, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, that every one of the 92 elements composing the earth is affected differently by a combination of light and magnetism.

The new eye has given traces of the two missing elements that no one yet has found on earth, although scientists are certain they exist. They are known simply as elements 85 and 87. Chemists predict that 87, when found, will be quite radioactive, jet black, of metallic lustre, probably insoluble in water and melt at about 450 degrees Fahrenheit.

Coal Mine Is Center of U. S. Population

Linton, Ind., Sept. 1 (AP)—Nobody lives in the exact center of population in the United States. Using data furnished by the census bureau, Prof. W. A. Cogshall of the University of Indiana took bearings and found the center right in the middle of a strip coal mine, 2.9 miles northeast of here.

FILENE URGES HIGH WAGES

Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 1—The world crisis demands an increase in the world markets which can be brought about only through higher wages and lower prices effected through abolition of unemployment and more efficient mass production.

This was the solution presented to a gathering of German business men by Edward A. Filene, president of the William Filene Company, Boston, at the opening of the Leipzig trade fair.

He declared that successful American business no longer needed a protective tariff and that Germany would cease to need one when it has found the way to successful mass production.

League Backs Brazil in Leprosy Research

Geneva, Sept. 1 (AP)—Delegates to the 64th Council of the League of Nations fulfilled the general expectation today by adjourning until tomorrow, after a brief session, at which comparatively unimportant matters were considered.

They accepted an offer by the government of Brazil for establishment at Rio de Janeiro of an international center for leprosy research to be supported by Brazil.

Schneider Cup Race Course Bans Kites

Calshot, Sept. 1 (AP)—Small boys here must not fly their kites while Schneider Cup pilots are training for the races on Sept. 12.

The restrictions were put in effect after several fliers narrowly missed running into kites or kite cords while traveling at more than 300 miles an hour over the Solent. The airplane mechanism is so delicate such a collision might result in a crash.

Texas Oil Wells Reopen Tomorrow

Kilgore, Tex., Sept. 1 (INS)—Operators in the east Texas oil fields, from which not a drop of oil has been produced since Augwells tomorrow for curtailed production.

A new proration order is expected to be effective within the next 24 hours and Gov. Ross Sterling will revise the martial law order that closed the field.

LINDY'S WIFE IS 'BELLE OF BALL' AT TOKIO

Tokio, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Co. Charles A. Lindbergh lost the spotlight to his wife here last night. The colonel himself commented on it.

The occasion was a dinner given by Reijiro Wakatsuki, premier of Japan, to the Lindberghs, bringing to an end the ambitious round of social functions in honor of the fliers.

To begin with the invitations were phrased so that Mrs. Lindbergh came first. Wakatsuki gave the dinner to "the daughter of my friend, Dwight L. Morrow" New Jersey senator, "and her husband."

During the evening when cabinet members and their wives and other distinguished guests gathered around Mrs. Lindbergh, the colonel remarked:

"She's the belle of the ball—no doubt about that." Later he again agreed that it was Anne's party, all right."

The flying couple today turned their attention to the prospect of sightseeing at Karuizawa, where American Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes maintains his summer home. It is near Mt. Asama, the famous volcano which recently began erupting.

BAIL FOR 'RED FLAME' FAILS

Providence, Sept. 1—Although bail of $10,000 was ready for her release, Miss Ann Burlak, "flame girl" of the Central Falls mill strike, remained in Providence County jail today.

No official who could accept the bail was found by Dr. Gardner P. Reid, president of the National Textile Workers Union, who was prepared to post it.

Reid said he drove to the jail with "a truck load of bonds" and was informed officials there could not accept bail in excess of $5000. He was referred to Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman but could not find him.

Reid said the girl would return to Central Falls immediately after her release.

The General Fabric Mill in that town will be picketed at 11 o'clock tonight because of a report received at union headquarters that police would move against demonstrating strikers, Reid announced.

14 PERISH IN FOREST FIRES

Missoula, Mont., Sept. 1 (AP)—With 14 men dead and an army of 2200 in the field, Montana, Northern Idaho and Eastern Washington today carried on their battle against flames which have eaten relentlessly into Northwestern forests for weeks.

Ray Helm, Minneapolis, was the 14th man to die in the fight against the flames. He was killed when a burning tree fell on him as he labored with a fire fighting crew near Plains, Mont.

Conditions were reported generally improved today in the fire swept Boise and Idaho national forests, and National Guardsmen were detailed to conduct fire fighters out of the wooded sections.

Ex-Mayor Quinn Is Gaining Strength

Former Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, who suffered a heart attack Thursday, continued today to show marked improvement, Dr. William A. Noonan reported. He may be sitting up by the end of the week, it was said at his home, 105 Fresh Pond Parkway, Cambridge.

5 INDICTED IN BONDS FRAUD

An indictment charging former officers of the American Bond & Mortgage Co. of Chicago and New York with using the mails to defraud, was returned today by the federal grand jury.

The indictment charges sale of defaulted bonds on "The Regent," apartment house, Beacon and Park sts., Brookline, to Mrs. Marian S. Bradstreet of Beverly in 1928.

On Aug. 29 a similar indictment was returned in connection with alleged sale of defaulted bonds of Pelham Hall apartments, Brookline.

Youth Is Held in Stolen Auto Case

Harry Werksman, 18, of Pittsburgh, charged with interstate transportation of a stolen automobile, pleaded not guilty to a federal indictment before Judge James A. Lowell in federal court today, and was held in $2,500.

Rickenbacker Shakes Hand of His Wartime Air Foe

Cleveland, Sept. 1 (AP)—Two fighting men, enemies in France 13 years ago, had met and made it up today.

For the first time since their combat days in the World War, Eddie Rickenbacker and Maj. Ernst Udet greeted each other yesterday.

They made a striking pair. Rickenbacker, tall, slim and taciturn; Udet, short and almost pudgy, like a jovial Santa Claus without the whiskers, whose daring has made him a favorite with the crowds at the National Air Races.

At Chateau Thierry, Soissons, and St. Mihiel they opposed each other. Rickenbacker shot down 25 German planes, and Udet, who fought in company of Baron von Richthofen, is credited with 62 Allied ships.

"I'm tickled to death to see him," observed Rickenbacker, to think that we're both alive. Today will teach young America what it means to have been an enemy, and then have the privilege of shaking hands with one as a friend. We are proud to be friends now."

They shook hands then, and for about ten seconds stood eye to eye.

And that was how are met ace 13 years after a pretty tough war.

Divorce Stands

Mrs. Beatrice Clough Bachman has decided that her trial divorce from Dr. Robert Bachman of New York is a trial no longer, and the decree will stand. Instead of returning to her former husband, she is to marry Felix Doubleday, himself twice divorced. (International Newsreel photo.)

World Will Regret Tolerating 'Reds,' Says Alfonso

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1 (AP)—Former King Alphonso of Spain, during a recent visit to a Norwegian coast town, warned in a newspaper interview that some day the world would regret its tolerance of Russian Communism.

"Without discussing politics, which I have forsworn, I may say that the Russians seem to me to be an important cause of the economic troubles all over the world."

As for his own country, he said: "Do you believe the deeply religious Spanish people would have looted and burned their convents had there been no Russian influence at work."

ROWLEYS ARE RECONCILED ONCE MORE

A second reconciliation was chalked up today in connection with the suit of Dr. James C. Rowley of Lynn against Mrs. Dorothy Hannon, his former housekeeper.

Reconciled with his wife, Dr. Rowley several weeks ago started court action to get back from Mrs. Hannon a bungalow and money he had given her when he thought he was dying. Recently a master appointed by the court ruled in his favor.

Today Mrs. Hannon, forced to quit the bungalow, was reconciled with the husband from whom she had been separated for seven years, according to announcement by her lawyer, Herbert Broderick. Leaving the bungalow, which is at Bellair st., Lynn, she moved to the home of Edward Hannon on Walnut st. and took the furniture with her, according to Broderick, because it was all purchased in her name and was not ordered returned by the master.

YOUNG TO LINK RELIEF WORK

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Appointment of Owen D. Young of New York as chairman of the committee to co-ordinate local unemployment relief efforts was announced today by Walter S. Gifford, national relief director.

Gifford announced also a committee of 18 members to assist Young, including H. C. Knight, of Haven.

Activities of the unemployment relief organization have been divided into three divisions, Gifford announced as follows:

1—The activities, public and private, to provide relief funds.

2—The administration of relief funds.

3—Activities looking forward to distribution and increasing employment."

Meanwhile the relief organization announced reports from 25 cities and towns had indicated some signs of improved conditions in 14 of them.

Must Pay $200 for Firing R. R. Building

Four Braintree youths in Quincy court today were found guilty of burning a building and were sentenced to one month in the House of Correction. The sentence was suspended, however, and they were ordered to pay $200 each to the company that owned the building. The youths, Joseph White, 19, of Grove st., Donald Messerve, 18, of Vinton ave., George MacDonald, 19, of Case ave., and Walter Frazier, 18, of School st., were charged with setting fire to a building owned by the N. Y., N. H., and H. Railroad, in Braintree.

WOOER IS SHOT; BROTHERS HELD IN LOVE ROW

Attleboro, Sept. 1—After causing the arrest of her two sons and another relative, early today, in connection with the shooting of a man who was calling on her, Mrs. Anna Barlick, a divorcee, changed her story and begged for their release.

In spite of her retraction, Stanley Barlick, 22, was held in $15,000 bail in district court on a charge of assault with intent to kill Frank Zybura, 41, of Central Falls, R. I.

His brother, Felix, 19, was held in $10,000 bail as an accessory, as was Stanley Barse, 20 whose sister is Stanley's wife.

All pleaded not guilty and the cases were continued to Sept. 13. All the defendants live on Johnson st., Pawtucket, while Mrs. Barlick lives on Robinson ave. in this city, where the shooting occurred.

SHOT THREE TIMES

Zybura, who police say is married and has four children, was shot three times through an open window in Mrs. Barlick's home. Mrs. Barlick said she saw Stanley through the window and Sergt. William D. Norwood with Pawtucket officers arrested him and the others at their home.

Police Chief Terrence E. Flanagan took Stanley to Sturdy Memorial Hospital before the court arraignment, and said that Zybura, whose condition is serious, identified the youth as his assailant.

Mrs. Barlick was in court with the wife of her elder son. Police say that in retracting her story, she suggested they search for another man, whom she named.

While denying the shooting, Stanley admitted the whole family, including his father, disliked Zybura. Police are seeking the father for questioning. The Barlicks have been divorced about a year.

"I have known Mrs. Barlick for years and last night was at supper with her and her daughter, Celia, and her son, Felix," said Cubura at the hospital. "She asked Felix to stay and drive her downtown, but he refused. She asked me and I consented.

"Later we were talking together when we heard sounds outside. I went to a window and saw Felix and Stanley. Stanley cursed me and fired."

Auto Victim Near Death

Doctors at Somerville Hospital today held slight hope for Edward V. Stone, 50, of 58 Ten Hills rd., Somerville, who was hit by an automobile in Medford.

Napoleon's Royal Red-Head and Hat That Launched a Thousand Quips

THE EMPRESS EUGENIE

HER CHAPEAU—MODERNIZED

The hat that she decreed the mode finds its modern counterpart on the pretty head of this modern miss. Here it is, smart and saucy, yet demure.

WILL IT COME TO THIS?

Here are old line drawings of various styles of hats in the mode of the Second Empire. Feminine fashion vagaries being what they are, it's not at all unlikely that these styles will be the vogue again, with consequent peril to traffic.

THIS IS LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

OF ALL THE ADVICE which is being so lavishly given these days, there is none more worthy of attention than that of the Federal Children's Bureau, that parents should keep their children in school this coming year, no matter what sacrifice is necessary.

Reports from 23 states and 40 cities show that in 1930 more than 103,000 children, between 14 and 15 years of age, received working certificates permitting them to leave school. The figures for 1931 can only be guessed at!

Most of these children, we are told, will never go to school again. Educational continuity once broken can seldom be patched together. Many states have provision for continuation schools. Many more have not. At any rate, night schooling after a hard day's work is tough on the young boy or girl and, without question, less effective, considering the effort involved, than normal day-time schooling.

Educators are frankly dubious about enrollments this winter. Last fall the enrollments in most schools and colleges held up to the normal and in some cases even increased. Some were surprised at this, but the colleges, which had gone through the same experience in the 1920 depression, learned then that when unemployment is general young people who otherwise might be gainfully employed will take a chance on going to college, in many cases to their lasting advantage. Hard as times were last winter, that rule held good.

But last fall and winter there were still reserves. The question is, are there any reserves left now or are they exhausted? If they are exhausted, the colleges may look for a decided drop in enrollment. The unusually striking and informative advertising being done by some of our most progressive local colleges and business schools shows that their authorities feel it more necessary than usual to press the claims of education for young men and women of college age.

Prefer Wages to Education

But the Children's Bureau and the President are rightly more deeply concerned about the children of grammar school and high school age, particularly the children of wage-earners and small salaried men who are being hit particularly hard by present conditions. Those are the families that will find it hardest to keep their children in school for whom the temptation to send them out and pick up what little money may be available is almost overwhelming.

People of old American stock have been so thoroughly sold in the matter of education for over a century or more that normally they will make great sacrifices to keep their children in high school and even in college. But this tradition of universal education has little hold upon the parents of many European races who have come to us within the past generation.

Some of these peoples, notably the Jews, have a thirst for education even surpassing that of the old American stock. But other European peoples are very likely as a race to wish to take their children out of school at the earliest possible moment and to put them to work. The parents themselves had gone to work at an early age and had prospered in some measure; their parents and grandparents had done the same. A job and tangible wages were goods that they understood; education was an ideal, about the practical effect of which they were doubtful.

These are the parents that must be reached. The federal government, the state and the municipality, the local school agencies, the press and private benevolence will have to see to it that these people are reached and impressed by the fact that to allow their children to go to work this fall, as soon as the law allows, will probably leave their children jobless and thus increase the total number of unemployed.

Worse, if young boys and girls should succeed in getting employment in any numbers, their very employment might force down the general level of wages and perhaps displace adults with families.

Ignorance and Crime

From another point of view this condition is even more serious. The Wickersham Commission has pointed out that the percentage of criminal records is heaviest among the children of the foreign born, the second generation born in this country. This is the class which is most likely to be taken out of school and put to work by foreign-born parents. The children have not learned the lessons of labor and discipline which their fathers and mothers perforce learned under more severe conditions. They have picked up many of the American notions about work and money which have been very common among us of late. And very bad for us!

Leaving at an early age schools in which there has been little emphasis on hard and continuous work, they go out into jobs which cannot possibly give them the money wage to buy the luxuries they believe to be commonplaces of American life. Hence the heavy drift toward parasitism and crime among the very young. Prison statistics are showing heavy percentages of youthful criminals. Furthermore, they are showing, I believe, that offenders are to be found in prison in ratios according to their education (or lack of it). The heaviest percentages are found to be among the offenders with the least schooling. This tendency of our foreign born to take their children out of school at an early age may help to account for our very disquieting record in these matters.

School Better Than Loafing

There are many reasons, therefore, why it is advisable—yes, necessary!—for parents to strain every nerve this fall to keep their children in school. Many of them, it is true, will not profit by their schooling. Many of them would profit more by going out and working. But there is little chance this winter that they will find work to do. And even the pleasant, light occupations of our American public schools, which impose little tax on the brains or nervous energies of our children, will be safer for these children than the street corner idleness, which in the long run eats into the will power and work habits of those who let it get a hold on them.

Keep all the children in grammar school and high school at any cost. And, for this period of uncertainty only, keep them all in college, if it can possibly be managed. They will be better off and society will be better off. Every day the newspapers are proving that idleness is the root of most evil!

NEW PARALYSIS CASES DOUBLE YESTERDAY'S

With 423 cases of infantile paralysis reported for the month of August, the first day of September was marked with a report of new cases more than double the number reported yesterday.

Forty-six cases opened September, as against yesterday's report of only 19, and this is the largest single day's report since infantile a reign started this year.

The cases were distributed seven in Holyoke, five in Northampton, four in Springfield, two each in Amherst and Easthampton and one each in Attleboro, Belchertown, Bernardston, Beverly, Boston, Chelsea, Chicopee, Clinton, Everett, Fairhaven, Gill, Grafton, Greenfield, Hawley, Lee, Ludlow, Marshfield, Medford, Montague, New Bedford, North Andover, Northbridge, Oakham, Somerville, Waltham and Watertown.

The State Board of Health received official word today that 38 persons volunteered their blood for use in making infantile paralysis serum at Worcester's clinic yesterday, and the clinic obtained nearly six quarts of blood.

Nineteen of the donors were used immediately, while the other 16 were placed on the reserve list.

Two of the donors were girls who gave up vacation trips in order to contribute blood.

At Springfield, where the first death occurred last night, the members of the school board were being canvassed today as to the advisability of postponing the opening of the schools beyond Sept. 9.

HUNT 4 THUGS IN CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge police were searching for four robbers today, two of them boys in their teens.

The two boys, one about 13 and the other about 17, robbed Mrs. Anna Goldstein of Norfolk rd, Cambridge, of her handbag, containing $12, on Broadway near Crawford st. One grappled with her while the other snatched the handbag. They darted away across lots.

Two youths entered the variety store of Avedis Kurkyian on Harvey st, North Cambridge, last night, and while one of them flashed a gun and backed the storeman against the wall the other stalled for the cash register.

A passerby scared the youths. They ran out and sped away in a black sedan. The one with the gun was 6 feet tall, about 25 years old, and wore a brown suit. The other was about 21, 5 feet, 8 inches, and wearing a blue suit.

EUGENIE LOVED TOREADOR

More Romance in Life of Gay Empress

By LAURA VITRAT

"Viva! Viva! At 'em boy, at 'em!

More lunges and plunges, more sidesteps and wavings, more leaping and snortings, with aha and oh's in the galleries, fans fluttering, roses tossed in the ring from ladies' corsages, and then upon a bed of blossoms the bull heaves a death groan, drowned in the cheers with crimson spurting from a wide dagger gash.

Toreador Bows to Girl Who Embroidered Cloak

She embroidered the cloak for him.

Just as Clara Bow, say, might go down to Las Vegas, Mexico, and fall in love with, well, Sidney Franklin, displaying his prowess in a bull fight—as did lovely, bronze-haired Eugenia Montijo, the "IT" girl of the early 80's, go out and cold and hot again over a handsome toreador.

Eugenie didn't realize that her actress sister would be the Pauline Palace, Paris, so she saw no impropriety in it. Besides, was she the Duke the first one in her life had professed his passion to her and then married her a

Rough Red Head

It was not quite a century ago that male hearts in Paris and old Madrid were fluttering and falling like autumn leaves before the charms of a red-headed IT girl.

Later the young lady, who started out as a plain Mademoiselle, was invited to take a solid gold armchair on a raised dais beside Napoleon the Third. She was known thenceforth as the Empress Eugenie and ruled typewonedly—ever fashion.

Eugenie Offers Hand for Toreador to Kiss

As for the toreador, when the gracious daughter of a Spanish grandee stood up and reached her white hand over the rail for him to kiss, he held his lips to it long, and then whispered softly:

"Ah, lovely Eugenie, even as my dagger has dealt a mortal thrust to yon bull, so has your fair regard left my heart bleeding. How dare one of my less noble estate breathe to a count's daughter the adoration that overpowers me.

"Like Juliet in her balcony, you are too fair for mere mortal to attain."

It sounded good to Eugenie and she made a date with him for that night.

The affair lasted during the two weeks that she and her mother vacationed in Puerta, during which time she wandered arm in arm with him through the town's cool arcades in daytime, when he was off duty, and at night through the fragrant gardens of the Alcazar palace.

BOY'S PRANK UPSETS B. & M. 'BUGGY'; 1 HURT

Vaughn Coffin, 28, of 140 Mountain ave., Malden, escaped injury. Both are railroad signalmen.

The obstructions were not sufficient to wreck a train and were apparently placed on the rails by boys to see what a train would do to them. Rivers police and railroad detectives are searching for the mischief-makers.

YOUNG BANDITS ROB AUTOIST

Harry H. Thompson, of Andover st., reported to Lexington police today that two men, armed with revolvers, held him up on Waterstown st., Lexington, near the Belmont Spring Country Club, and robbed him of his money and automobile.

Thompson could give but a meagre description of the two men, but described both as about 20 years of age.

DRINK WAS AS BAD AS A GUN

Mrs. Alice Heath, 34, of Charles st., Lynn, was sentenced in Lynn court today to two months in the house of correction for putting a feminine touch in store robbery.

Thus the customary gun, but armed with a bottle of liquor, she entered a Charles st. store, employed her feminine wiles on John Cznosky, clerk, and poured him a drink.

Cznosky drank and didn't know anything for several minutes. When he revived Mrs. Heath and $30 from the cash register were gone.

Somerville Firemen Refuse to Rescue Tree-Sitting Polly

GIRL STOPS MAN WITH BAD $10

The skill of a pretty cashier in the Calvin Theatre, Northampton, in detecting counterfeit bills was revealed today through the federal grand jury's indictment of Gino Sandri of Greenfield.

Sandri was indicted on a charge of attempting to pass a counterfeit $10 Federal Reserve Bank note.

According to the charge, Sandri passed the bill to Miss Helen McGrath.

THE GIRL NEXT DOOR

"FUN TO MAKE ME THE PRIZE SAP," SAID HENRY

"Hardboiled Henry,' they called him aboard ship.

"No woman, bragged Henry, ever persuade me to put my head in the noose. Not like I have nothing against them," he would chivalrously add, "but it's just that I'm not the same variety of sap that the rest of you are.'

It was hinted that Henry had had an unfortunate love affair. Henry grinned and shook his head.

"Nothing to it," he assured them. "It's only the workings of a bright bean.'

His self-confidence irked his shipmates, and there were deep plottings to assist Henry in failing off, at least in stubbing his toe. They raved about blondes and went to ecstacies over brunettes, deliberately put them in his way, but although Henry danced with them, smiled upon them and made himself generally agreeable, he remained unmoved.

When the ship was docked in Deep Harbor for the summer the majority of the crew were disfigured.

Deep Harbor consisted of one main street and a cluster of tiny houses that edged the blue harbor where the fishing boats found shelter. One movie house, a bowling alley and a town hall where dances were held twice a week were the extent of Deep Harbor's social activities.

Henry Rae grinned when he heard they were bound for Deep Harbor.

"Good place to rest," he remarked them. "You can get plenty of beauty sleep—and Heaven knows you need it!" he added insultingly.

Henry Is Trailed
As He Meets Mary

In the course of events Henry went ashore with the other half before a week was gone his shipmates observed he was out of sight the minute he could get a foot on the beach. Plainly, Henry had found some place to go. His shipmates discussed it and decided it was their duty to investigate such a state of affairs.

Henry Rae arrived at the place where he usually met Mary. Eluding Tub Jenks was no matter in a village as small as Deep Harbor. Henry was quite angry, too, until Mary laughed at him and he forgot everything but the blue of her eyes and the shining gold of her hair. In a short time he had known Mary, he had never ceased to marvel at the slim, aristocratic prettiness of her.

"Tell me, Mary—who are you?," Henry had begged, but she only smiled and shook her head with a mysterious finality. He knew nothing of her except that she was very lovable and very sweet. Vaguely he began to dream of her future. A future with Mary close by.

On the day that Tub Jenks came back to ship with a New York Sunday paper, Henry Rae was deciding to ask Mary to marry him. He had thought over very carefully and his decision was the result of his cogitations. It was Tub with the Sunday paper that upset Henry's plan. Tub was scanning the rotogravure section.

"Miss Mary True, who will play the lead in 'I Paside Down.' Broadway's latest musical comedy. Miss True is spending the summer at her home in Deep Harbor."

Sa-a-a! What a swell time girl anyhow!" Tub aggressively demanded. Henry Rae had torn the picture from the page and "Sap!" Mary's eyes widened.

"M-mm," Henry lit a cigarette, "Here I was thinkin' you was a nice little country girl, and you turn out to be a chorus dame —what's a good one on me all right!'

'What are you talking about?" Mary demanded.

Sa-a-a," Henry glared at her. "What's the idea of handin' me that line?"

"I work for the people next door to her," Mary was pointing at a big white house set in a magnificently terraced lawn. "They say I look a little like her—" she added wistfully.

"Aren't you Mary True?" Henry demanded suddenly.

COURT SCORES PRISONER, WHO APPEALS CASE

Judge Good Says the Community Is "Well Rid" of Types Like Him

The longest sentence ever meted out in municipal court for carrying a gun was given Bernard H. Radouin, 20, of Camden st., South End, today, by Judge Francis J. Good, who sent him to Deer Island for two and a half years, which is the maximum.

Radouin appealed and was held in $2000 bail for trial in Superior Court.

He was arrested last night by Special Officer John W. Gorey of Milk street division and U. S. Customs Officer John F. Magee as he stepped down the gangplank of the steamer Governor Dingley, coming from the provinces.

Judge Good commended the two officers for their alertness in noting that Radouin had a gun in his pocket. It was a .45 calibre weapon, and they noticed the bulge. It was not loaded.

"The community is well rid of your type of citizen," said Judge Good in sentencing Radouin. "The only sentence fitting in your case is the maximum of two and a half years, which I now impose."

According to the police, Radouin refused to explain where he obtained the revolver and an investigation is being made. Police say it was a stolen gun.

Mahoney, wounded State Trooper George C. Doring at South Sudbury and the pursuit of his car ended in a crash at Spencer in which Miss Ouelette suffered a broken leg.

Toy Gun Fails Youths in Attempt to Rob Him and Fiancee in Car

When he was 19 years old Forrest, then a gas station manager, was held up, robbed and beaten up by gunmen.

Manley was left on the doorstep of the hospital by his two companions, Police later arrested two youths, one in Arlington and the other in Medford, and after grilling they are said to have admitted being with Manley. They are Joseph Craig, 20, of Mystic ave., Medford, and James Donoghue, 20, of Felisway, Medford.

They were arraigned in East Cambridge court before Judge Walcott, pleaded not guilty to attempted robbery while armed and were held in $5,000 each for the grand jury.

"If my gun hadn't jammed, I'd have killed all three of them," said Forrest today, after a visit to his fiancee, Miss Ellen Riley of Carver rd., Watertown, who was unnerved by her experience."

Forrest was unaware that the gun pointed at him was a toy pistol, but he drew his gun and fired anyway. The wounded youth was hurriedly dragged away by his comrades who fled with him in a stolen automobile.

GUN AND MASK FOUND

The policeman and the girl were on their way home from a theater and had stopped for a few minutes on Elm st., near the Payson park school.

After the shooting Forrest drove to the Belmont police station and reported it. He is 26 and has been on the force a year.

In the textile industry, New England woolen and worsted and silk branches operated on increased schedules while less reduction in the quantity of raw material used was reported by the cotton mill.

The amount of raw wool consumed was 18.2 per cent greater in July than June in this district, although the typical increase is only about 2 per cent, according to the report.

Five per cent greater volume in residential building was noted and commercial and factory construction also registered increased volume.

MORE MEN THAN WOMEN ARE ENDOWED WITH "IT"

By HELEN ROWLAND

SOMETIME- I think I'll write a book to show that women are endowed with IT - perhaps because men are less self-conscious than women.

Most men appear to think that just being a MAN is an irresistible charm in itself—like being a blonde or a press Angora or a brand new baby.

When it comes to doing the charming, most men leave all the heavy work to women. It never occurs to a man to wonder if he is going to make a woman happy. It's up to a woman to make him happy. It does not be a problem to a woman to ask herself whether he is IT or not. The whole question in his mind is whether or not the woman interests HIM. If she does, that is enough. He never stops to ponder whether he is interesting her or not. He just takes it for granted that he is.

HELEN ROWLAND

Self-contentment is a wonderful thing! It's a pity that more women are not filled with that sublime self-complacency which is the basis of all savoir faire, and per sonal magnetism.

It is [illegible] that a man [illegible] not be bothered by self-consciousness and doesn't know that IT. For a plain man, it makes a woman more confident—but it makes a man positively insufferable!

What is masculine "IT," anyway? What makes a man attractive to women?

[illegible] telligence or handsome or successful—or even just because he is in love with her. She may MARRY him for some of these things—but not one of them would make her heart go dizzily and her breath leap up into her throat at the sound of his motor-horn under her window.

"IT," in a man, is manner, poise, responsiveness—the light of understanding in the eye, the instinctive knowledge of how to make love to a woman, without either yawning with listlessness or crushing out her ideals with caveman tactics.

Many a plain, bald, middle-aged man has more "IT" than a conceited young Adonis. Many a little shrimp, who understands women, has more charm for the girls than a six-foot Apollo, all brawn and protoplasm.

But, almost any man can have "IT" who has enough intelligence and [illegible]

Discord in Baseball ↑ McManus Should Help
Case of Wilson Passing of Ruel
Blame Night Life ↓ Hornsby to Stay

ALVIS GIVES BROUILLARD CHANCE

It does not require the services of a Sherlock Holmes to discover that all is not peace and harmony in the ranks of some of our major league baseball clubs.

Asked point blank if Hack Wilson would be with the Chicago Cubs next year, President William Wrigley replied: "I hope not." He then went on to mention that Hack's value to his ball club had been ruined by the fact he did too much of his playing night times. I understand that hits made by a ball player at night clubs don't help his club win pennants.

Wrigley went on to state that he hoped Rogers Hornsby would be with the Cubs for many more years. This probably means that Wrigley intends to retain the Rajah as manager

Hornsby has been a storm center in Chicago this year. His club has been in turmoil at times, and those persons who do not like the Rajah insisted that he should go. Wrigley apparently thinks otherwise.

Hornsby didn't get to first base as manager of the Braves after he replaced Jack Slattery. There was considerable discord in the ranks of the Tribe, and it was not until Hornsby went to Chicago that matters were adjusted.

The trading of "Muddy" Ruel by the Red Sox to Detroit in exchange for Marty McManus brings a first-class ball player to the Hub. Ruel was mentioned as a possible pilot for the Sox before "Shano" Collins was named for the job. Ruel has only caught 10 games for the Sox this year, which has caused some of the boys close to baseball to nod their heads knowingly.

McManus is a third baseman, but will probably be used at second base by the Sox. The Sox can stand all infield strength possible

You will see plenty of upheavals in baseball between now and the time the season opens next April. The dear old magnates usually don't air their troubles in public like the boxing promoters, but they, nevertheless, manage to make what changes they desire in their lineups

Bill Pickens Is Back in Auto Race Game

Alex Sullivan, high-powered publicity man, tells me that Bill Pickens is the driving power behind the auto race meeting which will be promoted by the Boston Garden at the Rockingham track, Salem, N. H., on Labor Day. Bill will furnish the daredevil racers and the advance ballyhoo. The Garden will come through with the necessary financial backing. A happy combination. Bill was formerly manager of Barney Oldfield.

When Bill promoted his famous Marathon Bunion race from Coast to Coast, with Cash-and-Carry Pyle acting as his right eye, he possessed plenty of contestants and sufficient ballyhoo, but he lacked cash. And even a bunion Marathoner must eat. He can use a vacant field to sleep in, but no substitute has yet been found for groceries

The auto racers will use the dirt track at Rockingham which Bill Dwyer had rolled for thoroughbred horses. There will not be any banks on the track. This will furnish thrills for the fans Eliminate the element of death or serious injury and the ordinary auto race wouldn't draw a corporal's guard.

Langford Bout Will Be an Exhibition

All thought of staging a bout between Sam Langford and Paul Berlenbach at St. Albans, Vt., with small gloves has been abandoned. Instead the Tar Baby and Punch 'Em Paul will box six one-minute rounds and wear 16-ounce gloves. They will also be permitted to wear headgears if they wish. Under such conditions we wish success to the show. There is a desire to see Langford and Berlenbach in exhibition contests, but nobody cares to see either of these famous veterans injured in a real bout. The St. Albans promoters exercised good judgment in changing their original plans. They merely fell in line with a suggestion made in this column.

Alvis Denies Alliance With Jack Kearns

Ray Alvis, manager of Young Jack Thompson, was on the other end of the wire.

"I just signed Young Jack Thompson to defend his title as world's welterweight champion against Lou Brouillard in a 15-round bout in Boston on October 23, piped Ray. This is the best way I knew of to spike the rumor that I had a deal on with Jack Kearns to give Jackie Fields first crack at the championship. There is also no truth to the claim that Tom McGinty is in a combination with Kearns and myself.

"I refused to match Thompson with Young Corbett on the Coast, as nobody can lick a native son in California. They just don't allow such things to happen.

"I was willing to give Jimmy McLarnin a title shot, but Pop Foster wanted the weight for the contest 145 pounds, two notches under the welterweight limit. He also insisted on as much jack for Jimmy as I wanted for Thompson. Jack only got $2500 when he licked Fields. I knew I had the best fighter in the welterweight division and was willing to gamble. Not so with the McLarnin Foster combination.

"You can make a little wager now that Thompson will hand Brouillard a shellacking. I'm hopping back to Chicago, but will return to Boston two weeks before the show."

Harry Payne Whitney, famous sportsman and owner of a swell stable of thoroughbreds, left an estate of $239,301,017. He could buy plenty of oats with that bank roll; also get down many a $2 bet. After a millionaire has indulged in all the other thrills of life, he usually purchases a flock of fast horses.

Random Shots at the Target

Football players are getting ready for the call to arms. A month from now there will be a wild rush on to get seats on the 40-yard line for all the big games. No depression in sports.

The U. S. open golf championship at Chicago this week is getting a big play in the newspapers in every part of the country Unless you know your golf these days you just don't belong in any major league sport fanning affair.

They tell me Charley Retzlaff will click Joe Sekyra for a loss in their New York bout tonight. Retzlaff just isn't permitted to meet anybody who is expected to be too rough with him. Safety first methods are expected to get the Western socker into a big money match. Good management is as important in the boxing game as a powerful right-hand belt.

Ernie Schaaf Vittorio Campolo

The heavy artillery of Schaaf was again prominent in the third round, when he landed a stinging left hook that shook his opponent from bow to stern. The battle staged at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, was a fine exhibition of boxing.

Vittorio Campolo Gunboat Smith

"Nine—ten, you're out!" cried Referee Gunboat Smith, as he tolled the ring knell of Vittorio Campolo after Schaaf had floored the Argentinian. Campolo was conscious when counted out. But the birdies were twittering and his legs had turned to rubber.

OUIMET QUALIFIES IN AMATEUR TITLE PLAY

LEHMAN AND YATES TIE FOR LEAD

Beverly Country Club, Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—Arthur "Dutch" Yates, of Rochester, N. Y., veteran of many golfing wars, tied young Johnny Lehman of Chicago today for the lead in the qualifying rounds of the United States amateur golf championship. Yates duplicated his first round score of 74 for a total of 148 after Lehman had cracked par with a 76, the best score of the tournament, to post the same total.

Beverly Country Club, Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—With the first day's leaders finding trouble and all the veterans still flirting with disaster, Johnny Lehman of Chicago shot a par cracking 70 today for a 36-hole total of 148 and took a one-stroke lead in the qualifying battle of the United States amateur golf championship.

Gus Moreland, 20-year-old Texas champion and Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, former college star, moved into second place tempestuously at least, with totals of 154 each for the two days' play.

Moreland, who was second on the first day's list with a 73, had a good chance to tie the lead from Lehman when he sliced on the last two holes. The Texan muffed a two-foot putt on the 17th and fired his second into a trap on the 18th, winding up with six and a score of 76 for the round.

Lehman Score Best of Tournament

Parks had rounds of 75-74 and seldom had any trouble over the course that was soggy from heavy rains. Lehman's score was the best for the tournament so far. His card showed four birdie

Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland, Ore., with 80—78—158, was eliminated, and George Voigt of New York, with 78—77—155, was trapped by the ragged edge. It was figured nothing over 153 would have a chance to qualify.

Ouimet was in no serious difficulties and was satisfied to place himself well inside the qualifying field with a 78 and total of 157.

EMPEROR JONES SEES YOUTH PACE AGE IN FIGHT FOR AMATEUR TITLE

Phillip Perkins, Stapleton, N. Y., shown driving off in the National Amateur Golf Championships at the Beverly Country Club, Chicago, while Harrison Johnston of Minneapolis, former champion, looks on. These two veterans were rated as probable winners when the tourney started, but each fell down in his first round and now appears unlikely to qualify. Most of the other veterans are also trailing more youthful rivals.

Bobby Jones, king of 'em all, watches the championship from the sidelines for the first time in 15 years. The amateur crown the boys are fighting for is one of four major links titles now owned by the wizard of Atlanta. He is shown talking things over with Charley Seaver, Los Angeles youth, who had a great first round and is now considered a serious title threat.

(All photos by International Newsreel.)

Jack Westland, above, led the field in the first round with a 72, only one over par. This youngster is the Chicago district champion. He was not believed to have a chance against such experienced players as Johnston, Perkins and the like, but he shaped up like a second Jones at the start and it is going to take some great golf to keep him from walking off with the honors.

LADY LUCK DESERTS BRAVES

FIGHT LIKELY TO KEEP TEAM IN 5TH PLACE

By JOE CASHMAN

Class in baseball, as in everything else, will tell in the long run, as our Braves have declared to their sorrow in the past month.

During the first half of the campaign, the Tribesmen remained above the .500 mark in the standings and in the fight for a first division berth, but were unable to live up to the high promise of early season performances. Today, as we go to press, the Braves are only seventh in the National League race, but they are within striking distance of fourth place and only one game ahead of the Pirates.

The natives have been in the pennant contender's role all season, even when they were only trying for a .500 game average. Of late last month, however, that precaution was thrown to the winds and they proceeded to drop three out of four

Tribe Stayed in Losing Streak

Then they returned home to take on the Robins, whom they had beaten nine games in 14 starts and lost two out of three.

Still ahead of the Dodgers in games to six, they lost only one advantage a few days later by losing, only one game out of five to the Winds City aggregation at the Wigwam.

As bad as that was, worse followed was worse.

The champion Cubs came to town. They had won more than over every other opponent. But Braves were leading them by two games, eight in six. Five games were played here and the Chicagoans captured each and every one of them to depart with a three-game edge.

Before that Chicago series, when Lady Luck first started to frown on them, the Meheobsliggins record against the first four clubs was 28 victories and 27 defeats. Today it is 33 victories and 41 defeats.

In spite of their misfortune of late, though, the Braves have been quite hustling and fighting. They have as much pep and ambition to-day as ever and it is to our guess that regardless of how they fare from here in, their never-say-die spirit will pull them through to a win over the Pirates for fifth.

They lost two to the Giants today, but the second place Giants have had to struggle an hour for a pair of victories.

Sun Beau Back at Saratoga Track

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—After a month's layoff in Chicago, where he won the Lincoln Handicap, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau is back at the Spa ready to meet Twenty Grand in the Saratoga Cup Saturday.

Grand showed his paces yesterday, when he worked a mile and one-half in 2:37.

Bat Battalino Suspension Lifted

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 1 (INS)—The threat of suspension in every state having a working agreement with the National Boxing Association had been lifted today, from over the head of Pat Battalino, world's featherweight champion.

Battalino was returned into the good graces of the association and ended the tangle that had existed in Connecticut boxing circles for the past week by agreeing to give his manager, Peter Reilly, or Eddie Shea, of Chicago, a cut on Sept. 15.

Dorothy Taylor, the girl you used to see at Witmark's office, is now at the Grand Central Palace . . . Bobby Clark and Paul (Brookline) McCullough have been signed for their Cohan revue musical show which is to be called "Here Goes the Bride . . . As you may have deduced from the name and from the fact that Mr. Arno is producing it, the play will poke fun at the Penn district racket . . . Arno has written the book and is designing the costumes and scenery . . . Edward Clarke Lilley will stage the show . . . Harry Bailey, who wears the title of "technician" at the Chicago Opera Co., but who is really their boss stage hand and a member in good standing of the I. A. T. S. E., draws down an annual salary of $25,000 for supervising the stage crews for the opera company at home and on the road . . . And, in case you are interested, the Boston local of the stagehands' union have gone to the Bay cold on their members. Fred Dempsey, who is secretary-treasurer of the International

Some years ago all of Broadway's smart set used to go Sunday-boating on the Algonquin . . . More recently it has been Sardis and the St. Moritz . . . But this week-end the little hamlet of Sands Point at Port Washington, L. I., has a corner on the brains and beauty of Broadway . . . Glance over this list of notables who are summering there: "Gene" Buck, Mare Connelly, Mr. and Mrs Irving Berlin, Clifton and Margaret Webb, Libby Holman, Jerry ("Little Show") Seriani, Mrs. Ziegfeld ("Follies" Borden, whose full name is Ethel Borden Harriman, Alexander Woollcott, Beatrice McKenzie Marx Brothers, George S. Kaufman, who is busy writing a new musical show, and Harold N. Tyler Hallin's Rose . . . "E" Lillie, by the way, has become addicted to croquet, badminton and dominoes, but backgammon is still a mystery to her . . . Dominoes, incidentally, is enjoying a revival of popularity and all of the smart Y. C. stoops are featuring swanky sets of the danged things in various colors . . . There's a new variation of the game called "Squiff" in which you build down from the center domino, if you know what I mean.

And for those who have been wondering about him, may we report that Scotty Reinnes is at the Weber Duck Inn, and has been for the past two seasons . . . Also, he's still tossing that bass fiddle around like nobody's business.

Financial Market News, Stocks, Bonds and Commodities

STATE ST. Hears:

That the active constructive interests are nursing along a short interest. This short group together with the favorable news expected around Labor Day could form the base for a more impressive bull display than the markets have witnessed so far. Best "Street" opinion is that it will be just as unprofitable to follow weakness as it has been to follow strength.

J. I. Case

The continued heavy turnover in Case has been attracting the attention of many traders who point out that the company's capital stock was traded twice over last week. Dividend seems certain to be cut if not passed altogether, yet the situation has attractions for the bull trader acquainted to the [illegible] . . . Case is a [illegible] stock, at a price in and [illegible] . . . [illegible] to pay on a bit cramped.

Reports received by Boston brokers from their floor members indicate that speculists are impressed with the buying power of the public. They say occasional liquidation [illegible] place as fresh old situations and resembles cleaning up orders.

The Oils

After taking a leading part in the constructive operations the oils have been drops into the background. This quiet tone undoubtedly represents a period of consolidation. At the same time it is well to remember that the oils are nearing the end of their best seasons and could feasibly [illegible] in place of sharp upward swings.

National Cash Register is said to have turned the corner and earnings figures from now on will be more cheerful. One estimate places 1931 results at slightly better than three dollars per share. This is an old favorite of a colorful floor member who might well become a chance to try for higher levels.

Soft Spots

The brains are directing their activities toward the uncovering of market soft spots this week. It was Krueger & Toll and so far this week it has been Purity Baking. One observer feels that continued success in this direction would be genuinely disturbing. Trades without stop orders in a technical market of this character, left for Moosehead Lake, Me., to recuperate after his recent operation for appendicitis.

With any clearing of the foreign situation the domestic issues are likely to find themselves in high favor and it might be well for certain operators to select the most promising equities now. Foreign Power is said to be oversold, as is International Telephone.

BOND MARKET ACTION AIDS SENTIMENT

By FRANK H. MELOON

While the past month failed to bring about much change in the movement of shares, it provided some encouragement in respect to price stabilization, regarded as a necessary prelude to any lasting upturn. The improvement in the bond market during the past week or so has been the best aid to general sentiment. Without attempting interpretation of the sequence of events as to what [illegible] has been discussed among directors, who will have the final word on what action will be taken.

Benjamin A. Franklin
Public Service Co.

"There are questions of overproduction, price levels, fair trade practices, and other problems arising which the common sense of business men with proper support would solve," says Mr. Franklin.

"Here is might seem the government, instead of waiting to pounce upon apparent infractions of law, might, with broadened powers, offer definite advice and assistance.

"Suppose the closely obtained facts showed the actual level of orders to be averaging a given per cent, let us say 20 per cent below maximum capacity, would it be wise if a government representative in such circumstance authoritative body, could issue a mandate that no unit, in or out of the association should produce over a given per cent beyond that average?

"Suppose the average profit of the industry showed only a fair per cent, would it be wise if the governmental authority should issue a mandate that, in the main, the price of standard grades should not be lowered by any unit in or out of the association?

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Light volume of trading today made most price fluctuations practically meaningless. The talk heard on all sides is that the market will be more active "after Labor Day." The idea back of this, of course is that general business should then begin showing a definite upward seasonal trend.

Point Declines Are Quickly Recovered

Four leading stocks today gave a little example of just how lacking in meaning recent moderate fluctuations really are. Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone and Atchison all sold off a point in the first hour and then made almost immediate full recoveries.

Westinghouse Talk on Dividend Old

The bears today circulated the old story that Westinghouse might [illegible] dividend. The rumor was so much eaten as a cloak to ease [illegible] but it had little effect on the [illegible] of the [illegible] has even been discussed among directors, who will have the final word on what action will be taken.

Output Drop Is No Help to Oils

Oils were not helped by the record-breaking decline in output in the past week of 87,042 barrels. Standard of New Jersey, Standard of California and Socony Vacuum fired firm on light dealings.

Loew's Is Leader Among Amusements

Loew's, in demand at slightly higher prices today, was a leader in the amusement group. Trades were impressed by its action during yesterday's declining periods. The movie revue [illegible] coming into the better earnings season. Crowds can be seen daily in big cities awaiting the openings of film houses.

Sears-Ward Pact Split Not Bad

Failure of the attempt to reach a merger agreement for Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward was construed as bullish by many in that it reflected feeling of both parties that they could continue to do well apart. The bears did not succeed in lowering prices for the shares much yesterday and in several transactions today both issues were transferred unchanged.

Slow Recovery is Expected Abroad

Wall Street, while confronted with happenings in the foreign situation last week, still feels that things are far more settled in many countries and that the best that can be expected is a slow, laborious recovery over a long period, with more anxious moments from time to time. Germany has to build up confidence and more political throes to go through, and other smaller countries are still in banking problems.

U. S. Seen Likely to Lead in Recovery

There is a crystalized feeling that inasmuch as the United States sustained the first impulse of the economic crisis in her stock exchanges it will be the first to show definite recovery and so the foreign economists and financiers are looking more than ever before to her leadership. There are many who believe that owing to the situation in Europe and the Oil Lads of Threadneedle st has definitely yielded her position as leading world power to the United States.

American Telephone Shares "Tied Up"

There is scarcely an investment trust or a fixed trust that does not include American Telephone stock in its lists, and thousands of the shares of this company are thus tied up more or less permanently, through purchases by these agencies. There is always additional purchasing going on particularly by fixed trusts, and at current prices the yield is satisfactory on the dividend alone, without including right opportunities in the years to come.

McKeesport Tin's Meeting Awaited

PRICES WEAKEN IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Prices weakened in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange with changes limited largely to fractions. Trading was extremely dull, Rails were firm with utilities soft. American Telephone lowered over a point and Edison was down nearly 2.

Atchison was fractionally higher and Pennsylvania was down slightly. Bigelow Sanford added a point. Fractional gains were shown for American Woolen preferred, New England Telephone and United Fruit.

Waltham Watch preferred touched its previous low for the year on a recession of over 2 points. Eastern Steamship dropped nearly 2 points. Fractional declines were shown for Boston & Maine prior preferred, Crown Cork International, Gillette, Jordan, Television Boston Edison Pacific Mills and Sullivan Machine.

Appointment of receivers for the Florida East Coast Railway, with main line from Jacksonville to Key West, Fla., and pet project of the late Henry M. Flagler, marks the second major casualty among railroads of the South in the current depression, the first having been Seaboard Air Line.

Receivership for the East Coast was granted on application of the Standard Oil Company of entirety and was consented to by the railroad, the allegation being inability to meet interest due September 1 on the $45,000,000 first and refunding 5 per cent bonds and interest on equipment trust certificates.

LITTLE CHANGE IS EFFECTED IN DULL MARKET

New York, Sept. 1—September was ushered in by very quiet and uneventful trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

The turnover fell off the lowest level in recent years, and prices fluttered dully in an extremely narrow range. A fairly firm undertone developed, however, as railroad issues stiffened a little.

RAILS ARE HIGH.

This possibly reflected an optimistic news ticker discussion of the prospect of getting the increase in freight rates. The turnover was still under 600,000 shares.

Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central pushed up a point or two, and Santa Fe gained 3. Industrials gaining a point or so included Case, Lambert, Lewis and Union Carbide. U. S. Steel and other prominent industrials generally closed up fractionally.

Traders were extremely hesitant. September usually develops a more definite trend in the market than August, but clues as to what this trend will be were completely lacking.

The extreme inactivity of the market throughout August, and the complete absence of important selling even in the face of adverse news, both domestic and foreign, has been a considerable encouragement to bullishly inclined traders, but they mostly despair of getting any following in the market until the tenor of trade and corporate news changes.

Such items in today's news as Railway and the Tri-Utilities receiverships for Florida East Coast scarcely provide the proper atmosphere to encourage bullish effort. Nevertheless, those situations had been understood so far in advance that the market accepted them nonchalantly.

SALES ARE SMALL

Total sales in the stock exchange in August of roughly 25,000,000 shares were the smallest since August of 1924. The price average of 50 leading shares fluctuated within a range of only 7 points, and showed a net gain for the month of little over one point.

The reduction of the Reichsbank's discount rate to 5 per cent from 10 provided further evidence of the alleviation of the European crisis, but the monthly statement of the National City Bank points out that it will require more definite agreements for the resumption of payments when the war debt moratorium expires next July 1 to lift the cloud of uncertainty.

Weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve member banks in leading cities showed a gain of $37,000,000 in loans of securities, but failed to indicate the autumn stirrings of commercial activity in the "all other loans" classification, which includes commercial loans.

That classification showed a decline of $40,000,000 which may in part have represented further liquidation of bankers' acceptances in this country for foreign sources.

The preliminary estimate of last week's crude oil production giving effect to East Texas shut-down, indicated a tumble of more than 300,000 barrels in daily output. With the beginning of production under the new Texas conservation law, Wall Street is assiduously awaiting the results.

Stock Exchange to Close on Saturday

New York, Sept. 1 (INS)—The New York Stock Exchange will be closed on Saturday, Sept. 5, preceding Labor Day, in accord with a vote of the governing committee today. The New York Curb Market also will close on Saturday. Members of both boards petitioned their governing boards for the extra holiday.

'Crown Zellerbach Reports More Net

Crown Zellerbach Corp., for the three months ended July 31, 1931, reports a consolidated net income of $1,276,559 after all charges but before deducting minority stockholders' interests in subsidiaries, as against $1,185,088 reported on the same basis for the corresponding quarter of last year.

'Buying of Copper Remains Only Slight

Custom smelters either are out of the market or are asking 7¾ cents delivered for copper. Small tonnages of special shapes have been sold at that price delivered, but consumers are yet unwilling to pay over 7¾ cents for wire, bars and regular shapes.

Bank Notes Daily Gain in Deposits

Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, New York, reports its recent advice to depositors to withdraw surplus savings for purpose of "judicious spending" has met with no apparent response. Since that bank first experienced daily gain in deposits.

Plate Glass Output Shows a Decrease

Production of polished plate glass in the United States for July was 7,216,249 square feet.

This compares with 7,534,219 square feet in June and 8,326,171 in July, 1930, according to the plate glass manufacturers of America.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Sept. 1—Cotton futures today closed 3 to 6 points lower. Oct. 6.91-92; Dec. 7.12-13; Jan. 7.22, March 7.42; May 7.56-58; July 7.78; spot quiet; middling 6.66.

TOREADOR FELL FOR EUGENIE

Alas! Toreador Proves Less Able Than Bull

If the toreador had not proved less able than a bull on the last day of her stay, there might be no Empress Eugenia hats.

But these things are taken care of by fate.

After a second untoward experience in romance, tiny Eugenie, already winning prestige as a coquette, returned to Madrid, yearning for nobler contests . . . a royal courtier.

Soon the staid citizens of that city were whispering of having seen her on visits to the ancient galleries of art, leaning on the arm of the Prince de A—.

She likes the Prince, who was artistically inclined, are said to have lighted their passion gazing at statues of the Venus de Milo, Apollo, Pan. Suzanne in her Bath, the nymphs or a Baccante.

'Can One Turn Happiness Into a Statue of Stone?'

"Foolish boy . . . can one thus turn happiness into a stone?"

"Oh, my darling," replied the Prince, "let me adore you. Let us imitate the fauns and the nymphs. Let us love one another. Bring aside those veils that conceal you. Give me your lips. Kill with love, your ala-baster throat."

Language of such evident sincerity overcame tender Eugenie's heart, and she gave herself unreservedly to her noble wooer.

That night an ancient servant bowed low as he swung open the heavy oaken gate to the Prince's villa for her carriage to enter. In the Prince's studio, richly draped with dark velvets and ageless tapestries, she flung aside her gown of many layers of tulle and consented to pose for him.

Prince Chisels Image of Eugenie in Marble

The Prince chiseled the image of her lovely form in marble. They were happy now for a short while. But Eugenie's love grew cold standing on a pedestal and his turned to stone.

Still, that was by no means the last romance the fickle Empress. We'll tell some more of them tomorrow.

Red Worker Jumps From Jail to Home

But before he could be brought before the court a telegram arrived ordering him to report to Moscow to receive the Stalingrad Order for conspicuous good work at the Stalingrad tractor factory last year. The trial was cancelled.

PLEURISY

Mrs. M. S. Colbath, West Springfield, Maine, says:—"I do not wish to see anyone suffer as I have, so will say that the doctor a patient that I hope he will have success in curing all who call on him. When I came to Dr. Walsh for treatment in April, 1929, I suffered with pleurisy, pains in my side, was nearly dead, had lost weight and felt all run down. Now I am well. My reason for going to Dr. Walsh with my trouble was because I had read of the success he had had in curing of others who suffer as I did. I make this statement so that others may suffer as I did may profit by my experience and find relief as I have found relief at the hands of Dr. Walsh."

We Act, Why Not Hoover?

Congress Should Be Called at Once to Meet Unemployment Emergency

Governor Ely's speech at Oak Bluffs was one of the ablest and most convincing accounts of stewardship ever presented by a Governor to the people of Massachusetts.

It will be recalled that the Governor sought an emergency appropriation of $20,000,000 for the relief of unemployment, for the restoration of confidence which means the return of prosperity and for the development of the resources and the physical plant of the State.

The Republican Legislature granted him, with reluctance, it is true, a substantial proportion of his request and it increased the gasoline tax in order to make additional millions of dollars available for the construction of highways.

What has been the result?

Governor Ely reports that useful, constructive employment, in no sense smacking of the dole or demeaning charity, has been provided for 25,000 men and women who otherwise would be idle and suffering the hardship of unemployment with the resultant drain upon the public or private charities and the effacement of self-respect.

Not alone has useful employment been afforded in the construction of highways, in the building of hospitals, sanatoria and schools required by the increasing population of the State, in the reclamation of marsh lands and in the elimination of the mosquito pest.

But these developments and projects have been achieved at a saving, in some cases, of thirty per cent of the expense that would have been entailed in normal times.

In short, the State has provided honorable labor; it has expanded its physical properties to overcome congestion and to meet future needs; it has developed its natural resources while taking advantage of the decreased cost of building materials and supplies.

Additionally, the cities and towns of Massachusetts, thanks to the foresight of Mayor Curley and other aggressive Mayors, have furnished constructive employment for 50,000 other men and women.

And they, too, have derived for advantage of the taxpayers of Massachusetts the saving of thirty cents on each one dollar, made possible by the extraordinarily low prices.

As Governor Ely aptly says:

"These moneys were not expended in useless extravagance. Every dollar of it has gone for a purpose beneficial to the general welfare of the people of the Commonwealth. It has gone to build the things that needed to be built."

It is men like Governor Ely, Mayor Curley and Governor Roosevelt of New York of kindly instincts and sound business vision who have gone to the root of our economic situation and who will be deserving of our gratitude and admiration when the clouds are finally lifted and the sun of prosperity lightens the sky.

WHAT THEY HAVE DONE THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT OUGHT TO DO, AND WITHOUT ANY FURTHER SHADOW BOXING, PALTRY EXCUSES OR INTERMINABLE DELAY.

The national five-billion-dollar prosperity loan proposed by Mr. Hearst would give a national confidence where uncertainty and misgiving now hold sway.

That New England has been on firmer financial footing and with relatively less suffering than any other section of the country is due largely to the progressiveness of our political leaders who have been ready to build on the future and to our alert manufacturers unafraid to enlarge their plants and diversify their products.

Beer, the Medicine

For What Ails Us

Come to think of it, the nearest thing to a panacea for this country's troubles is beer.

By beer we mean good, four per cent, legalized beer.

And by our troubles, we mean unemployment, surplus farm products, and crime. Those three things, when you get down to it, are what ail us.

Legalized beer would make a big dent in all three

As Charles H. Tuttle, former U. S. District Attorney of New York and former prohibitionist, told Kiwanians up at Glens Falls, N. Y., the other day, legalized beer would put a million men to work.

There are more than a million men out of work, but to give jobs even to a million is worth something.

It is worth more than all the efforts of the Federal government to combat unemployment, anyway. And it is worth more than the efforts of the several States, as well.

Legalized beer also would provide an immediate market for a lot of the grain that the government has been buying and storing away in elevators and warehouses.

There is nothing to do with that now, unless we give it away to the starving Chinese—who, by the way, eat rice.

And we can't see that the government would be inconsistent in allowing this grain to be turned into beer.

The government has helped to finance the grape growers, whose grapes are now turned legally into wine concentrates or wine bricks, and thence into wine.

As for crime, the more good legal beer there is on tap, the less crime there will be on tap.

When beer is legal, their occupation will be gone.

Beer, in short, is the medicine to prescribe for a sick and unhappy country.

It would be the best cure that could be administered.

It could be prescribed by Congress without fooling with the Eighteen.h Amendment, which is going to be in the Constitution a good many years longer.

It could be legalized by the simple declaration in Congress that—up to four per cent—beer is not intoxicating.

It is not intoxicating, as it happens, unless you drink half a keg of it, and in this imperfect world few can do that.

Beer would be the answer to the nation's prayer. But it is an answer that you won't hear as long as Presidents and Congressmen are afraid of their own shadows, and don't dare to open their mouths for fear the Anti-Saloon League will jump down 'em.

Take Heed, Sam, Take Heed!

The dole, a government handout to the unemployed, has wrecked the Labor Party in England. It must never be permitted here under any guise.

American labor asks jobs, NOT CHARITY.

Why doesn't President Hoover call Congress promptly to pass a $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Loan to be expended in essential public works so that the jobless of the nation may have jobs? Why, Mr. President? See editorial, "We Act, Why Not Hoover?"

Whiskey for Children

Here is another sample of prohibition's workings that makes the average parent see red.

Mrs. Isabel Woodman, New York woman and mother of the girl pictured above, decided to investigate the sale of liquor to minors in her neighborhood.

In five minutes, as Mrs. Woodman told Magistrate Francis J. Irwin in West Side Court later, Helen had returned with the "whiskey," the price of which was fifty cents.

A fifteen-year-old girl had no more trouble in buying this poisonous concoction than she would have had in buying a can of fruit at a grocery.

If this were an isolated case, it might be overlooked. But, as anyone living in a large American city knows, it is not isolated.

In fact, the Government's prohibition agents themselves have set the example by employing girls as spies and decoys to get evidence.

You may have seen the story of 19-year-old Ruth Callahan, who, in Buffalo the other day, told how she had consumed enough alcohol in one night to make a seasoned drunkard see pink elephants. And Government funds, by the way, were used to buy the drinks on that occasion.

Prohibition Director Woodcock, we are glad to see, has ordered that no more girls or women are to be used in enforcement.

Let's hope that his agents will respect his ruling, though only a few days ago some of them in New York City took a young woman with them to get evidence against a night club.

But whether the Government uses them or not, you know that young boys and young girls can and do get liquor, and will continue to as long as the sale of liquor is left free and unsupervised to the worst elements of the population.

It had some sense of responsibility to childhood.

The modern bootlegger, it seems, has none.

New York Day by Day

Vaudeville Revival

NEW YORK, Sept. 1—Many believe the Palace, only all vaudeville theater in town and one of three in the entire nation, is blazing the trail for a vaudeville revival. The Sunday "celebrity nights" at the Palace bring the biggest and perhaps most representative audience on the Rialto.

The Palace has been the class variety house—the hope of every piffawmer—for 18 years. That vaudeville is not entirely dead is proved there. When it presents high class bills it is invariably packed. The drawback is that due to the scarcity of good acts bills are repetitious.

The Palace has been the proving ground of talent and also the graduating field for many artists to legitimate and motion picture triumphs. The tentacles of vaudeville have reached out to almost every high class theatrical endeavor.

It has spawned so many stars in other branches that it has become a shell with scarcely a handful of strictly vaudeville headliners. Vaudeville did not fight and permitted its ranks to be looted. It now pays the penalty in almost total extinction.

In the past few years it has secured headliners by bridging gaps between productions for favored stars. Bernhardt and Ethel Barrymore have appeared at the Palace along with hundreds of others. The only notable exception is Al Jolson, who has been offered as high as $10,000 a week.

Ten years ago there were nine high class all-vaudeville playhouses in the greater city. Most went motion picture. Others were experimental grounds for everything from Shakespeare to marionette shows. A vaudeville comeback necessitates a new chain of theaters. And I hear a syndicate is forming.

A public librarian tells me the younger generation shows little interest in O. Henry. Characters he wrote about have vanished—the professional Southerner, garrulous boarding house keeper, sweat shop owner, fighting Irishman, pretty and unsophisticated waitress, clothing store pullers-in, horse cars and boarding house front porches.

When I came to New York the boarding house area spread on West 57th st., solidly lined with brown stones from 8th ave. to the Hudson. My quarters was a top hall room in an establishment called "The Aldine" and after dinner we luxuriated in the splendor of one of those early American parlors which displayed decorative horrors including fireside conch shells and a red carpeted brick door stop. All of us were inwardly quite miserable while outwardly expressing a bourgeois defensive complex that This Was Life.

I remember a down the hall neighbor about whom was whispered: "He is writing a play." Through a slit in the door I saw him at all hours, his hair tousled and hands and bare arms spotted with the scurf of dried ink. His pen seemed always scratching on long sheets of ruled fool'scap. And then one day he vanished. Dramatic columns announced he sold a play. I sat in the balcony at the opening and thought it a masterpiece. But it ran only a week. The last time I saw him he was, ironically enough, selling tickets in a Pelham movie.

* * *

Incidentally, this was my first "opening night" on Broadway. The theater was the old Herald Square. Among critics were "Stuffy" Davis in a blue sweater, Lawrence Reamer, Rennold Wolf and Alan Dale. The only other critic of the present crop I recall seeing was Kelcey Allen. I also got my first peek at Diamond Jim Brady.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Always—Love

I KEEP it in a quiet corner of the room, under the picture of a face I loved.

It is a small, round, earthen jar, black with age, tightly sealed save for two spouts. Nobody knows what it is when first they see it. I did not know. It was brought to me by a seafaring man. He had found it in Peru . . . not in the regular shops but in a native hut amongst a pile of rubbish.

Elsie Robinson

The people in the house—they were poor Indians—were disturbed when he found it. They looked at each other strangely, a little fearfully. But he got it out of them at last. The thing had been found in an old grave, a very old grave, deep in the recesses of the hills. There were many graves there—of a strange people who had passed that way long ago. The Indians did not know who these people were. But the sailor man guessed . . . marveling . . . feeling his flesh creep a bit as he touched the old, blackened clay Incas?

There were many graves, they repeated. In nearly all the graves there were jars like this. But the vessels themselves were no great novelty. It was still the custom to place jars like these with the dead. Tear jars, they were . . . so that the dead might carry with them, on their darkened trail, a token from the love that longed to follow.

Tear jars, in Inca graves. How old? How many years since some brown, savage hand worked on that piece of clay? How many years since some poor, savage heart stored there its grief?

So many years. And so much happening in those years. So much of gain and glory—so much of pain and loss. Wars, conquests, wealth that still hang its glittering mirage above human history—then desolation blotting out the record of it all. Great cities going back into the sand. A lizard scuttling where a jeweled throne had stood. And then more wars—more marching feet—new cities springing from the ashes of the old—new wisdom and new riches and new night.

But always—love.

Always love—thatching a hut in the jungle, moving with pomp through a palace . . . dreaming, wrapt in sheep skins, on some lonely plain . . . laughing by a cradle . . . weeping by a grave.

Everything else changing. Nations changing. Customs changing. Power changing. Even the face of the earth changing. Love, alone, not changing. Love, always the same. Always love, going on and on, through every trail of life, trying even to follow the strange dark trail of death. Always love, persisting in spite of all the penalties of life, in spite of all the pangs of death. Everything else perishing beneath penalties and pangs . . . LOVE, ALONE PERSISTING.

Thousands of years between those tears which filled this clay—and mine. But love links them all. Love survives them all. Then shall we fear a miracle like this will last no longer than our fragile flesh and bone?

Just Folks

On Shopping Tours

To stay in the car or to walk round the block,
I am lost if I ever step in just to see
The lovely new things which the store has in stock.
Once within where the bargains are spread out to show
She knows very well that I'll never say "no!"

I've heard that some husbands, with splendid success,
Insist that their wives within reason shall keep
And can really convince them the costlier dress
Is not nearly so nice as the one that is cheap,
Well, let that sort of husband go shopping! Not I.
The prettiest gown is the one that I buy.

This counting your pennies is all very well,
For those who are careful and thoughtful and wise,
There are men who can stand when the clerks try to sell
And look on temptation with lustreless eyes,
But not I! For whenever I'm coaxed in to look
I am caught like a fish who has swallowed the hook.

So when Nellie goes shopping I sit in the car
Or stroll up and down till she comes from the store,
I don't dare to go where the pretty things are
For I've learned when I do that it always costs more.
Confronted by splendors she knows what I'll do

Platinum Vs. Gold

Platinum coins for the United States are urged by Dr. George F. Kuhn, the gem expert. He says the output of gold will decline, and we need something else as a medium of exchange, and platinum, which is precious, will fill the bill.

But the trouble with platinum is that the largest supply of it is locked up in the heart of the Urals, and mighty little of it exists anywhere else. And it is nowhere near so indestructible as gold. Sulphur eats it up, so does chlorine, and the alkalies raise hob with it.

The profoundest fact about gold, apart from its being an immemorial symbol, is that it is wherever you find it. Professor Rickard, the mining engineer, is not sure that the gold supplies of our West have been more than barely tapped.

Gold, the sun-god Re, "the luminous fluid of the sun, source of all life, strength and persistence," will be pretty hard to dislodge as a symbol. So glamorous it is, that even today honest thinking about its values is all but impossible. Poets dislike platinum, either on principle or because it is too hard to rhyme with. A million poets have sung of golden hair, but the platinum blonde hasn't inspired one yet.
